Mrs. Lindbergh's Own Appeal to Kidnapers

(By Associated Press.)

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.

To the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby:

Here is a heart-broken appeal direct from the mother of the child you stole.

The baby has been sick and its recovery may depend on the treatment it gets from you. You must be especially careful about the diet.

Mrs. Lindbergh issued to the press today the strict diet she has been following since the baby fell ill. She did this in the hope you might read this story and that there was some spark of humanity even in the heart of a baby thief.

"One quart of milk during the day.

"Three tablespoons of cooked cereal morning and night.

"Two tablespoons of cooked vegetables once a day.

"One yolk of egg daily.

"One baked potato or rice once a day.

"Two tablespoons of stewed fruit daily.

"Half a cup of orange juice on waking.

"Half a cup of prune juice after the afternoon nap.

That's all kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby. That's what the baby's mother wants you to give the boy. Follow her request and you may in some small part redeem yourself in the eyes of a contemptuous world.

Criticism, Good and Bad!

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE HOUSE wets have succeeded in gathering 145 wet votes and will force a vote on resubmission of the Eighteenth Amendment. One of the 145 votes was brought to the House in a wheel chair. That is called "one wet victory" although it doesn't mean anything. Both branches of Congress are dry, politically.

The state of Rhode Island has passed a bill repealing the state enforcement act and "legalizing" beer containing 3.75 per cent alcohol. Gov. Case signed the bill yesterday.

That also doesn't mean much. If you make, transport, buy, sell, drink 3.75 beer in Rhode Island, state authorities will not disturb you.

But United States authorities WILL disturb you. The wet is not helped when the state says "You may" if the national government says "You must not." And the national government will continue to say that for some time after March, 1933.

JAPAN WITH a polite smile accepts the League of Nations plan for a pleasant discussion of ways to end hostilities, also agreeing with China on a "temporary truce." That's in one part of the news.

The other part of the news is headed:

In other words, while talking peace they are fighting more savagely than ever.

WHATEVER ELSE prohibition may have done, or not done, it has certainly convinced hotel men that they are in the wrong business. One New York hotel that was making a profit of $800,000 a year a few years ago is now in the hands of a receiver.

Another big hotel lost $1,000,000 last year, and another lost $1,200,000. It would interest the income tax department to see what has happened to income taxes formerly paid by corporations operating hotels. There will be no income from that source in 1931 or 1932.

This is stated merely as a matter of interesting fact. Nothing will be done about it, or can be done about it, for the present. Customers of New York hotels sleep in the hotel, eat and drink in the speakeasy.

CONGRESSMAN WILLIAM IRVING SIROVICH, of New York, says modern critics "ruin the legitimate theater by destructive criticism." Critics reply that Congressman Sirovich wrote an inferior play, the critics said so, and this annoyed him.

MR. SIROVICH'S play may have been bad, none the less, much modern criticism seems primarily to prove what a smart little boy the dramatic critic is, and not written to help the theater by offering constructive suggestions to managers, playwrights and actors.

MODERN CRITICISM may be described, unfortunately, as "Smart Aleck" criticism.

Criticism worth while encourages the actor or playwright generously, points out his defects kindly, avoids wounding his feelings. Modern critics might study Boileau's way of criticising and encouraging the young poet Racine. The latter wrote to Boileau:

"I ought to tell you that I write with great facility."

The reply was:

"I hope to teach you to write with great difficulty."

SOME HAVE SAID mistakenly that one of our troubles has been installment buying. On the contrary, it has been an excellent thing, enabling the buyer to enjoy his purchase while he paid for it, promoting sales and prosperity.

Hereafter you will be able to "travel by deferred payment plan," an idea inaugurated by the Cunard Line. You buy your steamship ticket, paying part down, cross the ocean, travel, and finish paying for the voyage after you return.

Other steamship lines doubtless will adopt the idea that the old Cunard company has borrowed from the United States. It implies confidence in human nature, for th ocean trip, unlike an automobile, cannot be "repossessed" if it is not paid for.

THE METHODIST CHURCH will discard many of the old Wesley and other hymns, some because they are dull, others be-

BABY CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, JR. . . . . STOLEN BY NIGHT

Baby Lindy, again today the concern of the world as police powers in all parts of the country alertly search for traces of his kidnapers. His mother, Anne Spencer Morrow Lindbergh, expecting a tiny brother or sister for him, shortly, has suffered a collapse.

CHILD SICK, MOTHER FEARS FOR HEALTH; 4 STATES COMBED

With the entire nation shocked by the crime, one of the most daring in modern history, these were the developments today in the kidnaping last night of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., world's most famous baby:

Threatening harm to the infant if their demands are not met, the kidnapers asked $50,000 ransom in a note pinned to the nursery window, it was revealed.

Col. Lindbergh was willing to "pay anything" to secure the safe return of his 20-month-old golden-haired son and was preparing to meet the conditions laid down in the note.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh, his sorrowing wife, who is about to become a mother for the second time, was confined to her bed, bravely fighting off hysteria, fearful that the baby, already suffering from a cold, might suffer from exposure. The child was clad only in his night clothes.

President Hoover ordered all agencies of the Justice Department to assist police of New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Delaware in tracking down the kidnapers.

BULLETIN

NEWARK, N. J., March 2. — (AP.) — A postcard was mailed to Col. Lindbergh from here today, reading:

"Babe safe. Instructions later. Act accordingly."

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are willing to pay $50,000 ransom demanded by kidnapers who last night stole their 20-month-old son from his nursery crib in their palatial home.

The willingness of the Lindberghs to pay the sum demanded, as well as the fact that a ransom note threatened harm to the baby was disclosed for the first time today by a close friend of the Lindberghs.

Following the statement made by the friend of the family, Capt. John J. Lamb, in charge of the New Jersey State Police detail working on the case, said:

"Harm would inevitably come to both the police case and to the child if the conditions laid down in the note were not followed. And I am advising Col. Lindbergh and Mrs. Lindbergh to carry out the conditions of the letter."

READY TO MEET ALL TERMS

The reticence of the distraught parents of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., concerning the presence of the note which had been reported previously without confirmation was attributed to the anxiety of both the Colonel and Mrs. Lindbergh to please the kidnapers—pay any

Tokio Orders End of Hostilities, League Chief Informed

GENEVA, March 2.—(INS.)—Japanese troops have been ordered to cease hostilities in Shanghai, Naotake Sato, Japanese delegate, informed President Joseph Paul-Boncour, of the League of Nations Council, today.

The order was given, Sato declared, because the Japanese offensive had been successful in driving Chinese troops 20 kilometers (12.4 miles) from the International Settlement in Shanghai.

CHINESE IN FLIGHT

SHANGHAI, March 2.—(INS.)—The Japanese army today scored a smashing victory all along the Shanghai battle front.

The Chinese army, at 6 o'clock tonight, was in retreat at nearly every point except Woosing, where the commanding officer refused to obey Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai's order to withdraw.

SHANGHAI, March 2.—Wu Te-Chen, Mayor of the Chinese native city of Shanghai, upon learning of the kidnaping of Col. Lindbergh's baby, telephoned me at 8 o'clock tonight:

"Please extend my heartfelt sympathy to Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh.

"I met them on their recent flight to the Orient, and consider them two of China's greatest friends."

Extras telling of the Chinese defeat on the Chapei-Woosung battle front tonight also carried big headlines on the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby.

International News Service headquarters in the Cathay Hotel was forced to install an extra secretary to answer telephone inquiries, particularly from American and British residents of Shanghai, as to whether the baby had been found.

Butler Kidnaping Clue Fails State Troopers

U.S. JOINS HUNT FOR KIDNAPERS

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP.)—The federal government today entered the hunt for the son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his kidnapers amid a clamor in Congress for legislation to check such crimes.

The co-operation of the Department of Justice was pledged after President Hoover had conferred with Attorney General Mitchell. Customs and immigration authorities likewise watched for the culprits at the borders.

In the House there was quick committee approval of a bill making it a federal offense to send kidnaping threats through the mail and imposing heavy penalties for violation. A special committee meeting was sought to consider another measure to lay a federal ban against abductions that transcend state boundaries.

Blame Phila. Police For Bungling Tag Number

State police of the Butler barracks today investigated and found worthless a possible clue in the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., 20-month-old son of the famous flier.

On receipt of a teletype request from Philadelphia, Capt. J. C. Mauk sent a detail to question Leslie Clark, of Sarver, a hamlet 10 miles from Butler, whether his automobile bearing Pennsylvania license number 4476-D had been stolen or lent.

The police reported that Clark, employed in a dairy at Silverville had been seen driving his car, a Ford sedan, in Sarver last night, by neighbors. They verified that the machine had been in Clark's garage all night.

Capt. Mauk said:

"The police down east are evidently guessing at the license number of the kidnapers' car."

A check also had been made of Pennsylvania license No. 4476-B and it was found not to have had amount—do anything—if they could only get their child back safe and sound.

This anxiety was further heightened by the condition of the child when he was snatched from his nursery crib and hustled into the chill of night, clad only in his sleeping suit.

The baby was suffering from a severe cold and had been under a doctor's care.

Plaintively, Mrs. Lindbergh said:

"He will suffer because the poor child has had a cold. We have been doctoring the baby for several days."

The intellectual poise of the former Anne Morrow, the poetess, the fearlessness she has displayed in daring flights with her husband, were shattered by the vision of her only child shivering somewhere along a wind-swept road.

Pay anything and get him back—that was her plea and Col. Lindbergh's desire.

WILL MEET ALL DEMANDS

Henry Breckenridge, attorney and friend of Col. Lindbergh, said:

"There is an undenied rumor that a sum of money has been demanded. All demands will be met if the means and the occasion present themselves."

Meanwhile, the "flying colonel" prepared for a mysterious airplane flight. Whether it had to do with payment of the ransom or the search for the kidnapers was not known. An airplane was made ready for him at Princeton Airport.

On a tip from Oscar Busch, well-known trapper, Col. Lindbergh early today left with Busch and two state troopers for Flagtown, N. J., about 15 miles from the Lindbergh home, a "moonshine district," recently cleaned up by federal authorities. A plane was ordered and made ready for him upon his return from the densely-wooded section, where it was thought the kidnapers might have had a pre-arranged "hideout."

U. S., STATES JOIN IN HUNT

At the same time, detective genius of the federal government and of four states took part in the hunt for the heir to the Lindbergh-Morrow fame and fortune.

Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen from his nursery crib as he slept last night, and his parents and authorities were convinced the job was accomplished by a professional kidnaping gang.

While the flying colonel maintained his usual unperturable calm, Mrs. Lindbergh, struggling bravely against hysteria, was forced to her bed.

The strain upon her was intensified by the fact that she soon is to become a mother again.

LINDY HAGGARD AND SLEEPLESS

Col. Lindbergh looked haggard and sleepless from his all-night vigil—far different from the spic-and-span "Lindy" of other days—as he attempted to comfort Anne.

When a friend suggested he get some sleep, he replied:

"I intend to remain awake until my baby returns home.

"My wife, Anne, is in bed. I guess the strain was too much for her."

The Lindbergh family physician was summoned to look after Mrs. Lindbergh.

As he set forth with state troopers on the automobile sortei into the wooded "moonshine" section, Lindy said:

"We have received several leads, but most of them have fallen down.

"The police have leads now in Atlantic City, Philadelphia and Yarbley, Pa. I don't know how important they are, but we are clutching at every straw."

CLUE FOUND IN PHILADELPHIA

As every available policeman and detective in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware sought a trace of the missing million-dollar baby, a promising clue was reported from Philadelphia.

Authorities of the Quaker City reported that a mysterious taxicab was seen at dawn with a heavy-set man and a woman clasping a child within the machine.

Police Sergt. Charles Patterson saw the taxicab.

A fine-tooth combing of the wooded area around the isolated Lindbergh home here unearthed a chisel which was believed to have been carried by the kidnapers to "jimmy" the upper-story nursery window, if necessary.

The chisel was found not far from the house and was turned over to State Trooper S. J. Kelly, fingerprint expert, for examination.

The tenseness in the Lindbergh household was further tautened when a fire siren at the town headquarters screeched at a false report that there was a fire in the home.

While state troopers searched every inch of woods in the vicinity, Capt. J. J. Lamb, in command of the state police detail on the Lindbergh estate, reconstructed, in theory, the manner in which the kidnapers had worked.

DESERTED FARMHOUSES SEARCHED

Careful search was made of each of the numerous deserted farmhouses in the region.

The only clues for the state troopers to work on were provided by a ladder used by the kidnapers in climbing to the upper-story nursery in the Lindbergh house; footprints of a man, joined later with those of a woman; a blue-and-white blanket found 60 feet along the single road leading from the house to the main road, and an abandoned stolen blue sedan automobile found in Hillside, N. J.

The ladder, a collapsible affair, found close to the house, contained fingerprints which are being checked up with those of notorious kidnapers.

The footprints indicated that the man and the woman removed their shoes or else used wrapping about their footwear.

The blanket may have been one used by the kidnapers to wrap the baby.

The abandoned sedan answered the description of a machine in which a man and woman were reported inquiring as to the Lindbergh estate shortly before the kidnaping last night.

OPEN WINDOW BARES CRIME

The most famous baby in the world was stolen from his nursery crib some time between 7:30 p. m. and 10 p. m. last night.

Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, ran to the nursery at 10 o'clock when the nursemaid screamed at finding the crib empty. At first it was thought the baby had rolled out or crawled under the furniture.

A search of the room revealed no trace of the child. Then a window was found open and a ladder was nearby.

Col. Lindbergh telephoned state police headquarters at Trenton and news of the kidnaping was flashed throughout New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware.

Deputy Police Chief Charles E. Williamson, of Hopewell, one of the first officers to reach the Lindbergh home after the kidnaping today told of how the noted parents of the missing child felt and acted. He said:

"Chief Harry Wolf and myself arrived at the house. Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh and several others met us at the door. They ushered us into the living room, where the colonel told us what had happened.

PARENTS CALM IN CRISIS

"Both were standing up well under the circumstances, and while we questioned them for a few minutes they sat in chairs, close to each other.

"Col. Lindbergh was the calmest of the two, although Mrs. Lindbergh did not cry. She cried after we left, I was told.

"Col. Lindbergh took us out in the yard and we found the ladder about 50 feet from the house. Both Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh accompanied us up to the nursery room.

"Col. Lindbergh told me that he knew as soon as the report came to him that the baby was gone that he had been kidnaped. I asked the colonel if he had heard any unusual noise He replied that he had not heard any noise except the wind blowing around the house.

"While we were outside we followed footsteps for a distance and decided that the kidnapers' car must have been parked on Featherbed Lane (the road leading to the Lindbergh estate).

"There were auto tracks on this road past the old bridge, on the dead end of the road. The footprints led across the field.

"Col. Lindbergh said he could see no reason why anyone should want to kidnap his baby.

INFORMS GRANDMOTHERS

"I asked Col. Lindbergh if he suspected anyone. He replied: 'No.'

"Col. Lindbergh said the nurse last saw the child between 7:30 p. m. and 7:45 p. m. As we stood in the room he pointed to the unlocked window and said:

"'They must have got in through that window.'

"Mrs. Lindbergh, during our questioning, interrupted and asked the colonel:

"'Don't you think we should notify our mothers immediately?'

"Mrs. Lindbergh took the phone and called her mother at Englewood, and a few minutes later placed a long distance telephone call to Detroit, and talked to Col. Lindbergh's mother.

"I stepped out of the room while she was calling, but I did hear her say when she reached her mother:

"'Our baby has been kidnaped.'

"I told them that from the preparations made, the kidnapers must have been professionals, determined to get the child at any cost.

"'Yes,' Mrs. Lindbergh replied, 'and it probably would have happened even if we were at mother's.'

"The colonel then asked if we ought to look around some more at the footprints in the mud or should we wait for the state troopers.

MOTHER SHOWS STRAIN

"I replied 'I guess we'd better wait for the troopers.' The butler had been at the phone several times talking to the state police whom he called after talking with me at 10:20 p. m.

"Corp. Wolf, of Lambertville, then arrived, closely followed by Maj. Charles A. Schoeffel. The scene was then re-enacted. More troopers continued to arrive and a quick search was made of the grounds.

"I noticed that Mrs. Lindbergh was very calm at first, but she seemed to be showing the strain with all the excitement. I suggested that she take something for her nerves. She said she was all right and that she would wait until later."

Everything pointed toward the kidnapers having carefully prepared in advance for the baby stealing. The isolated nature of the Lindbergh estate contributed to the success of their plans.

The Lindbergh home was built for the famous flying couple while they were on their flight to the Orient last summer. It is a two and one-half story structure standing about half a mile back from the Stoutsburg-Wertsville highway. It is surrounded by dense woodland and there are no other houses near it.

The home is of colonial design, built of native stone. It sits on a hillside in the center of an estate comprising about 15 acres. There are wings on both ends of the house.

GUARDS POSTED ON ROADS

The baby had been put to bed by Betty Gow, his nurse, and Mrs. Lindbergh, who had given him a goodnight kiss at 7 p. m. The Colonel, the butler and his wife, were the only other occupants of the house.

Col. and Mrs. Lindbergh were eating a late "snack" at 10 p. m., when the disappearance of the baby was discovered.

The Colonel aided in the search of the grounds dressed in his aviator's leather jacket and without a hat. He would not discuss the kidnapping with newspapermen. He said:

"I'm sure you'll understand how I feel. You will have to excuse me."

Asked concerning the condition of Mrs. Lindbergh, he added:

"She is bearing up as well as might be expected."

Immediately after the kidnaping alarm was broadcast by state police, guards were posted along the main roads leading from New Jersey into New York and Pennsylvania.

Police at Princeton, N. J., were told that men in a black or dark blue sedan, bearing New York license plates, had inquired along a nearby road their way to the Lindbergh home just before the kidnaping. A description of the men and the machine were broadcast throughout New Jersey and adjacent states.

CHECK UP ON ALL EMPLOYES

This car later was identified by a resident of Brooklyn who said it had been stolen from him earlier in the day.

State police began an intensive checkup on men who have been engaged in construction and renovating work on the Lindbergh home.

A complete list of all persons who have been employed on the estate was obtained from George Hullfish, Lawrenceville, N. J. foreman of the Lindbergh home construction job.

The official alarm which was flashed over the police teletype network was as follows:

"Col. Lindberghs baby kidnaped from Lindbergh home at Hopewell between 7:30 and 10 p. m. Boy, 19 months, dressed in sleeping suit. Search all cars.'

Tramps Through Night in Search for Clues; Police Reveal Woman in Plot

(Copyright, 1932, by the Associated Press.)

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.—(AP.)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, who dared death along the uncharted New York-Paris airway with silent calm, appeared numbed by the catastrophe that reached into the lonely hills to strike at him. Dressed in a leather jacket, an old cap and a worn pair of trousers, his shoes caked with the sour mud which gives name to the region, he tramped most of the night, seeking some clue to his lost namesake.

In the early hours of this morning a truck driver, arriving at Philadelphia, reported that he had seen a blanket-wrapped bundle "that looked like a baby doll" lying in a ditch beside the roadway a mile and a half from the Lindbergh place. State police, who immediately searched the entire area, reported they were unable to find any such bundle.

Police had not intended to reveal their discovery that one of the kidnapers was a woman, but after the information had been inadvertently revealed, they elaborated somewhat. They said the clear mark of a woman's shoe had been distinguished among the formless prints of the man, or men's, stockinged feet.

TRACKS FOLLOWED

Maj. Charles Schoeffel, of the state police, said the tracks of the kidnapers started from the west side of the Lindbergh home and were traced a distance of two miles.

There were several crossroads, he said, where a car might have picked them up, but he would not say if tracks of a car that might have been used had been found. All roads were so cut up by the visiting automobiles after the alarm was spread that it was impossible to distinguish tire marks.

The first newspaperman to reach the Lindbergh residence was an Associated Press reporter, who found the colonel, bare headed as usual, nervously pacing the grounds, while state and local police and detectives went over the estate with flashlights.

The house, ablaze with lights, was silhouetted against the foreboding background of the wooded Sourland hills.

Col. Lindbergh refused to make any statement. His butler, Ollie Wheatley, who hovered anxiously near his master, likewise nervously declined to have anything to say. Mrs. Wheatley, the butler's wife, who was the fifth adult in the house when the kidnaping was staged, likewise would not talk.

SEARCH FAILS

The search of the grounds of the estate yielded a scant handful of clues to the kidnapers, who had worked with such quiet, and stealthy dispatch that the five adults in the house were never aware of what was happening in the nursery upstairs.

Pplice quoted Col. Lindbergh as saying:

"It was very windy outside during the early evening, and the noise of the wind could very easily have blanketed strange sounds that at another time would have been heard."

The nursery, which is filled with every device for childish pleasure, is situated in the right hand corner of the second floor front, and faces on the private roadway. The open window through which the kidnappers entered, is 30 feet from the ground.

ESTATE GUARDED

A cordon of police was thrown about the Lindbergh estate early today, to keep out the hundreds of private cars which sped there after hearing of the kidnaping. Roads for miles around were snarled in a hopeless traffic jam.

Police have discovered no finger prints in the nursery. The ledge of the nursery window by which the kidnaper entered was covered with dirt, evidently from the man's feet.

Both the nursery windows were unlocked. The shutters of the window are usually locked, but last night both Mrs. Lindbergh and the nurse had failed to lock one of them. The catch would not work. The balky shutter was on the window which the man used to reach the baby's crib.

KIDNAPING TOPS 2-YEAR WAVE OF CRIME

Abduction for Ransom Now 'Big Money Racket,' Many Famous Cases Recalled

CHICAGO, March 2.—(AP.)—The kidnaping of Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., came as a climax to what anti-crime crusaders here said was a two-year wave of kidnaping in which 2,000 or more persons were abducted for ransom in the United States.

During those years, authorities said, kidnaping joined robbery, liquor, vice and drug traffic as a "big money crime." Kidnaping syndicates tortured or terrorized victims into paying millions of dollars ransom, they said. Alexander Jamie, "Secret Six" investigator, said:

"There probably were 400 kidnapings in Illinois during 1930 and 1931. Forty-nine victims reported officially paid ransom, many others were released without ransom, and several hundred made no official reports."

In a desperate fight to stem the wave, Midwest crime fighters have banded together to obtain federal legislation that would deter abductions by making transportation of a kidnaped person from one state to another a capital crime.

'SECRET SIX' ACTIVE

A petition for such legislation has been submitted to Congress by Col. Robert Isham Randolph, head of Chicago's famous "Secret Six," Walter B. Weisenburger, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, and others.

Although organized kidnapings for ransom are a comparatively recent outgrowth, the authorities recalled that the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby tops a long list of abductions of the last few decades, of which these received nation-wide attention:

1898—Gerald Lapiner, Chicago. Later found in Ohio.

WHITLA CASE RECALLED

1909—Billy Whitla, Sharon, Pa., released after payment of $10,000 ransom. Kidnapers sentenced to prison.

1910—Michael Solmeca, New York. Held for $8,000 ransom and later found slain.

1911—Letha and Hazel Cretchel, Chicago, brought back from Kenosha, Wis., unharmed; Baby Hencks, Chicago. Her fate is still a mystery although she was believed to have been slain.

FRANKS THRILL SLAYING

1927—Marian Parker, 12, Los Angeles. Her mutilated body was returned to her father. Edward Hickman was hanged in 1928 as her "thrill slayer."

1928—Melvin Horst, 4, Orrville, O., never found. Two men went to prison, convicted of kidnaping, but later won new trials and acquittals.

1929—Jackie Thompson, Detroit. Returned after payment of $17,000 ransom and three men convicted and $5,000 recovered later.

WOMAN KIDNAPED

1931—Mrs. Nell Donnelly, Kansas City manufacturer. Held for $50,000 ransom but returned safely, supposedly without payment. Dr. Isaac D. Kelly, St. Louis. Held for $150,000 ransom but released after paying undisclosed sum. Marian McLean, 6, Cincinnati, found dead. Charles Bischoff, 45, confessed, was declared insane, and was sent to the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane for observation. Adolphus Busch Orthwein, 13, son of Percy J. Orthwein and grandson of August A. Busch, St. Louis, was returned safely after being held 20 hours. Family denied paying ransom. Charles Abernathy, Negro, now serving 10 years in prison for the kidnaping.

Life Term Penalty For N. J. Kidnapers

NEWARK, N. J., March 2.—(AP.)—Kidnaping is a high misdemeanor in New Jersey and any person found guilty of it is subject to a life sentence in state prison at hard labor.

The minimum sentence is five years.

LINK KIDNAPING TO RADIO PLEA

NEW YORK, March 2.—(INS.)—Recollection of the compassionate manner in which Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh spoke of the Chinese during her first radio speech 10 days ago, gave rise here today to the theory that some fanatical Japanese might be connected with the kidnaping of her son.

Mrs. Lindbergh did not mention the Japanese in connection with her plea for funds for flood relief in China, delivered over the Columbia network, except to state that country was "beautiful."

But she did conjure a picture of the stark misery and want of China's ignorant millions in describing how China's landscape and people contrasted with those of Japan.

Her speech was a simple relation of the attempt Col. Lindbergh, a Chinese physicians and an American doctor made to get medical supplies from Hankow to Hinghwa for relief of those injured there during the floods.

KIDNAPING CLUE HERE FAILS

any connection with the kidnaping, it developed.

Meanwhile every police agency in Western Pennsylvania in common with those of the entire eastern part of the country joined in the hourly-widening hunt for the kidnapers.

Capt. Albert Carlson, in charge of the Greensburg barracks, state police, said 300 state police of Pennsylvania guarded the highways all night.

BUSES, TRAINS SEARCHED

A check was made on all interstate buses coming from the East as well as all trains arriving in Pittsburgh from eastern points.

Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh wired the chief of police of Princeton, N. J., 10 miles from the Lindbergh home, asking for a minute description of the kidnaped child and its clothing, down to the shoe laces. This description will be read at all roll calls and the patrolmen asked to write down and memorize the details.

Railroad police, though not requested as yet to participate in the hunt, said they were ready to lend their aid in any way possible.

Supt. Walsh, a champion of the bill pending in Congress to make kidnaping a federal offense, declared:

"No mercy should be shown to kidnapers. They are murderers at heart and should be treated as such. The measure before Congress making kidnaping a federal crime is the most progerssive step to wipe out kidnaping in years. A kidnaper should be executed.

'BLOW AT NATION'

"The abduction of the Lindbergh baby is a blow at the entire nation. I will do all in my power to aid in the kidnapers' capture."

Walsh asserted he had been informed by Pennsylvania's senators, David A. Reed and James J. Davis, that they would vote for the passage of the kidnaping bill.

Director James M. Clark, of the Public Safety Department, declared the Pittsburgh police would leave nothing undone to aid in the apprehension of the abductors. He added:

"Kidnaping has become widespread. It is shocking that the Lindbergh child is now the victim of kidnaping racketeers. I favor making kidnaping a capital crime. Kidnapers should be given the extreme penalty."

On Walsh's orders, detectives were detailed to all railroad and bus stations to question any man or woman seen with a baby corresponding in age with the Lindbergh child.

Canada-Bound Cars Searched at Buffalo

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 2.—(AP.)—Within a few hours after receiving the police teletype notice of the kidnaping of the Lindbergh baby, Patrolman Raymond J. Bundschu, of the Buffalo Police Department, searched more than 300 automobiles before permitting them to pass over the Peace Bridge into Canada.

City police at all routes leading into Canada were instructed to be on the watch for any car resembling even remotely the one believed to have been used in the kidnaping.

'BUDDIES' OF AIR AID LINDY HUNT

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—Famous airmen of the east, fellow members of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh in the fraternal organization known as the Quiet Birdmen, formed an aerial posse today to attempt to discover from the air the hideout of the kidnapers of the Flying Colonel's baby son.

From the headquarters of the secret organization the bare statement was made that decision had been reached to organize a search party, but the identity of the fliers to participate was not revealed.

PRAYERS ASK BABY'S RETURN

Prayers for the safe return of the kidnaped Lindbergh baby were offered by Father James R. Cox in Old St. Patrick's Church, Seventeenth street, today at the special monthly service for mothers and babies.

Father Cox in his sermon told his hearers:

"I hope that every mother here will realize what Mrs. Lindbergh is experiencing and offer prayers daily that her son will be returned to her."

2 MEN KIDNAP NILES (O.) BOY

NILES, O., March 2.—(AP.)—James DeJute, Jr., 11, son of a contractor here, was kidnaped early today while on his way to school, police reported.

The boy was driven off by two men in a small brown coupe, Anna May Mellina, 12, of Ashtabula, cousin of the boy, told Niles police.

James fought off the kidnapers once when they grabbed him, Anna May told police. They clutched him again after he broke away and drove off, but did not attempt to molest her, she said.

New Jersey Delays Reward in Kidnaping

TRENTON, N. J., March 2.—(AP.)—Gov. A. Harry Moore and Republican legislative leaders, after conferring by telephone with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, today abandoned plans to offer a reward for the apprehension of the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby.

Col. Lindbergh, officials said, asked that such action be deferred for the time being while initial efforts to capture the abductors were being made.

DETROIT, March 2.—Her only grandchild is kidnaped—

But just as she did that day five years ago when her son fought rain and fog alone over the Atlantic, Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, Sr., today is teaching seven chemistry classes at Cass Technical High School as usual.

The grandmother today looks wan and worn, showing the effects of a sleepless night at her home in Grosse Point, Detroit suburb. It was there just before midnight that Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh notified her mother-in-law by telephone that "Little Charlie" had been stolen.

The 300 children Mrs. Lindbergh faced today are round-eyed with the day's amazing news. But they did not speak of the tragedy to their teacher, who told the principal:

"There is no use in going East just now. I am trying to keep calm and go on with my work. I am grateful for it now. It will make the hours pass a little less slowly."

Kidnaper Search Traps Rum Auto

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 2.—When state police stopped a car five miles east of Uniontown in search of the Lindbergh baby they found 20 gallons of liquor in kegs and three cases of bonded whisky, they reported.

The troopers took into custody Joseph P. Leichliter, 21, and Mrs. Allen Massie, both of Cumberland. Police said the car was registered in the name of Bessie Smith, 122 Anderson street, Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Morrow, wearing a black cloth coat with fox collar, a small black hat framing her worried countenance, left her home at 9:25 a. m. She had tried all morning to reach Mrs. Lindbergh by telephone, but the police had commandeered the wire for reports on the search for the baby, and no outside calls were possible.

A procession of expensive cars drew up at the stately brick house from early morning on, as "Betty" Morrow's friends learned of the abduction, and came to offer their sympathy.

The high-powered Morrow car sped through the crowded towns that lay between Englewood and Hopewell. It glided in and out the lanes of traffic, with an International News Service car behind it, and as it went, Mrs. Morrow tried to divert her mind by reading newspaper accounts of the kidnaping. She has said she believes widespread publicity to the search may speed the boy's return to his parents.

Through her closest friend, Mrs. Charles Hulst, wife of a local lawyer, Mrs. Morrow declared she had no direct word since last night from her daughter, Mrs. Lindbergh, or her son-in-law.

Mrs. Morrow's daughter, Elizabeth, remained at the Morrow home.

Kidnaping Victim Has Cheer for Anne

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., March 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Ernst F. W. Alexanderson, whose 6-year-old son, Verner, was held by kidnapers for six days in 1923, said today that Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh must have confidence that her baby will be restored to her, as was her boy, son of the world-famed radio engineer. She said:

"She must not despair—she must not give up hope of getting her baby back."

Lindy Kidnaping Leads London News

LONDON, March 2.—(INS.)—London newspapers gave wide prominence today to the kidnaping of Col. Charles A. Lindberg's baby son.

The Evening News stressed the American "kidnaping racket," which, it declared, made it necessary for extreme precautions to be taken to protect wealthy American children.

120 TROOPERS GUARD ROADS

HARRISBURG, March 2.—(AP.)—More than 120 troopers of the Pennsylvania state police patrolled all roads leading into the state from New Jersey last night in vain search for the Lindbergh kidnapers. The troopers were in automobiles and they covered little traveled byways as well as the principal highways, Maj. Lynn G. Adams, head of the force, said today. Many stopped suspicious looking cars and examined their occupants.

NEW YORK, March 2.—(INS.)—New York's mighty police force today turned out almost to a man to find the first baby of the land—Charles Augustus Lindbergh—kidnaped for ransom.

Hordes of detectives descended on ferries, tunnels and bridges from New Jersey to watch for a sign of the missing million-dollar baby.

Cities and towns throughout New York and Connecticut were asked to keep a lookout for a speeding automobile containing a drowsy and probably crying child of about two years of age.

Derailed Car Halts Traffic in East End

Early workers were delayed today when an outbound Wilkinsburg-East Liberty street car was derailed near Fifth avenue and Craig street.

The car stood sideways in Fifth avenue, blocking traffic in both directions.

Lindbergh Baby Declared Image of Father

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.—(INS.)—Curly-haired, blue-eyed and chubby perhaps best describes the appearance of the sturdy, 20-month-old Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., kidnapers' victim.

The world-famous infant is described by those who saw him as the miniature image of his world-famous flying father, Col. Lindbergh.

A friend of Mr. and Mrs. Lindbergh, who observed the baby in the kindergarten of his aunt, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, said of him today:

"The baby is just learning to talk. What does he say? Oh, mostly the words that all babies learn to say first.

"He is an unusually sturdy youngster, and seemed exceptionally bright and alert. He is well into the toddling stage, and as tall as the average baby of his age.

Kidnaped Baby's Family Holds Great Wealth

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—The fortune on which the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby apparently seek to lay hands constitutes one of the largest in New Jersey.

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh are believed in aviation circles here to be worth between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000, while the fortune which the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, a former Morgan partner, left to Mrs. Lindbergh's mother has been estimated at nearly $10,000,000.

Col. Lindbergh wa[illegible]or boy when he hopped off in a borrowed plane for Paris in a flight that made him the world's foremost birdman. Fortune smiled.

He got the $25,000 Orteig prize for the flight and the St. Louis group which backed his venture gave him the Spirit of St. Louis plane in recognition of his success. He received an undisclosed sum from Daniel Guggenheim for making a tour of the United States after his return, later becoming technical adviser Pan-American Airways and T. A. T. His salaries from the two aviation concerns are reported to total $50,000 yearly. Large sums came to him from newspaper syndication, and from a book he wrote.

POLICE GUARD MISS MORROW

BOSTON, March 2.—(INS.)—Miss Constance C. Morrow, aunt of kidnaped Baby Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., and herself once an intended victim of an extortion plot when she was a student at Milton Academy, was guarded by state police at her dormitory at Smith College, Northampton, today.

At the same time the entire state police force of Massachusetts was thrown into the nation-wide hunt for the Lindbergh baby and his kidnapers.

Capt. Charles T. Beaupre of the state police, took charge of the search and ordered a state trooper from the Northampton barracks to guard Miss Morrow.

Today's events recalled the fact that Miss Morrow received several threatening letters while attending Milton Academy at Westwood, Mass., several years ago. Police attributed them to a "crank."

CAR ABANDONED NEAR LINDY'S

HILLSIDE, N. J., March 2.—(AP.)—An abandoned sedan found near here last night and answering the description of the car thought to have been used by the kidnapers of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., was stolen from Brooklyn yesterday, police were told this morning.

Police towed the car to their garage, saying they would examine it for fingerprints. It answered the description of the one whose occupants asked the way to the Lindbergh home yesterday.

The car belongs to Samuel Mandel, of 1519 East Third street, Brooklyn. When it was first found authorities thought they noticed an odor like chloroform, but Mandel explained he had spilled a bottle of perfume in it last week.

The place where the auto was found was on a route that might have been taken by the Lindbergh kidnapers. It is on the main Princeton - Somerville - New York highway.

Pet Dog and Cat To Be Rocket Passengers

BREMEN, March 2.—(INS.)—A dog and a little cat will be passengers aboard the world's first steered mail rocket, which Heinrich Tiling, German rocket designer, plans to shoot from the continent to Wangerooge Island, off the German coast, this spring.

The pets may also be holders of a new world's speed record, because the rocket, according to the inventor's claims, will reach a speed of about 600 miles per hour.

The question is whether the animals can stand the enormous speed pressure, but Tiling asserts they will land safe and sound after their flight through the atmosphere.

WORLD HAILED ADVENT OF LINDY, JR.

Famous Flier's Son Was Mother's Birthday Gift And His Name Her Choice

Universal Service.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., March 2.—The country's most celebrated baby, Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr., was born on Sunday, June 22, 1930, at 1:10 p. m., at the home of his maternal grandparents, the late Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

So tremendous and world-wide was the interest in his arrival that within a few minutes after the simple announcement of the birth had been made, it had been telegraphed and cabled to the ends of the earth.

Charles, Jr., came as a birthday gift to his mother, Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh, for she was 24 on that Sunday. His father, the famous flier, was 28.

MORROW GAVE NEWS

The first "official" announcement of the baby's arrival came from the late ambassador who, an hour after the child was born, told a friend:

"I'm a grandfather, and it's a boy! But don't you tell anyone."

His secret could not long be kept, however, for many friends had been aware of the preparations made at the Morrow home.

One whole wing had been turned into hospital-like quarters, and two nurses from a New York registry, with Miss Marie Cummins, the Morrow family nurse, were in attendance to aid doctors.

And so, within a few moments after Ambassador Morrow had informed his friends, the news was given to the world through press associations.

In Lindburgh's usual taciturn fashion, only the mere fact that his son and heir had arrived was announced. But from more talkative attendants these important facts came on that first day.

He weighed—seven and one-half pounds. His hair was blond, and curly. He looked "just like his father."

MOTHER WINS ON NAME

In the four days interval between June 22 and the day the birth certificate was filed members of the Morrow and Lindbergh families participated in an amicable discussion as to what the infant would be named.

That question was settled when the birth certificate disclosed he was to be "Junior." And it was understood to have been Mrs. Lindbergh's choice all along. It was reported, too, that Lindbergh had favored calling the mite after his father-in-law, but that for the first time since he hopped the Atlantic, three years before, he was turned back from his goal.

When Charles, Jr., was only 4 weeks old, it was reported he might take his first airplane ride on a trip to the North Haven (Me.) home of his grandparents.

FLIGHTS PROHIBITED

This plan was postponed for a while, however, and for the first few months of his life the baby remained at the Morrow home, guarded like a medieval prince and seen only by the intimate friends of the Morrow family and his famous father.

A little later the proposed flying career of the eaglet went into a ground loop, when physicians decided the child must not be taken for any sky rides.

The doctors ruled that no matter how much cotton was stuffed into the baby's ears, there was danger that the roar of the engine would impair his hearing for life.

In Maine, as at Englewood, extraordinary precautions were taken to guard the baby.

GUARD AGAINST CRANKS

Rumors that special watchmen had been assigned were confirmed when it became known that Col. Lindbergh, as the result of threats from "cranks," had taken such steps to protect his son.

Similar care was taken after the parents returned from the Orient and took their son to their Hopewell (N. J.) home.

For several months the baby has been a pupil at the private kindergarten school of his aunt, Miss Elizabeth Morrow, at Englewood.

An exceptionally bright and alert child, he was a great favorite among the parents of other children at the kindergarten. Most of these parents, at their first sight of him, remarked on his resemblance to his father.

During Charles, Jr.'s first few days, numeorologists, astrologists and fortune tellers vied with each other in forecasting his future.

All conceded that the heir to the world's most celebrated parents had something of a flying start.

They predicted what he would do in business, what type of woman he would marry and in what avocation he would find pleasures. But not one predicted that he would be—

Kidnaped.

STATE POLICE TELL STORY OF KIDNAPING

International News Service.

HOPEWELL, N. J., March 2.—The official "case history" of the kidnaping of 20-month-old Charles Augustus Lindbergh, son of the noted aviator, was given out today by Maj. Charles F. Stoeffel, assistant superintendent of New Jersey state police.

Maj. Stoeffel, speaking for Col. Lindbergh, said:

"Miss Betty Gow, nursemaid in the Lindbergh home for the past year, put the child to sleep in his crib in the nursery on the second floor. She left him, asleep, and went downstairs to her supper about 8 o'clock.

"At 10 o'clock, upon returning to the nursery, Miss Gow found the child was missing.

POLICE ALARM SPREAD

"Col Lindbergh telephoned state police headquarters at Trenton, and news of the kidnaping was flashed throughout New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York and Delaware.

"There are two windows in the nursery, both on the east side. The baby was carried out of one of these two windows. This window was warped, and it was impossible to fasten the shutters on it.

"There were dirt marks on the window sill and also upon the floor at the edge of the carpet.

CRUDE LADDER USED

"There were the prints of a ladder on the ground outside the window, and the ladder itself—a crude affair, apparently hastily constructed and not belonging to the Lindbergh estate—was found some distance away.

"Beside the imprint of the ladder was the mark of a man's foot. He either was in his stocking feet or had drawn a pair of heavy socks over his shoes—probably the latter, to deaden whatever noise his footsteps might otherwise have made.

"The man's footprints led from beneath the window to the point at which the ladder itself was found—about 50 feet from the house. There they turn toward the Hopewell road, and are joined by another set of footprints, those of a woman.

NO BLANKET TAKEN

"We succeeded in following this trail for more than two miles through woods and fields toward the Hopewell road. Then we lost it on a stretch of rocky ground.

"Col. Lindbergh tells me that the kidnapers apparently simply took the little boy without even wrapping him in a blanket. Miss Gow, at the Colonel's request, checked the blankets in the crib, and found that none is missing."

AVIATORS READY

Maj. J. V. Burwell, operations officer of the Long Island Aviation Country Club, of which Col. Lindbergh is a member, said all the pilots in the vicinity were available for the kidnaping hunt. He said:

"If the kidnapers got more than a half hour's start over the country and knew the back roads it would be difficult to find them."

Officials of the Alumni Federation of New York University today had their puzzlement over the failure of Col. Lindbergh to appear at their dinner cleared away by news of the kidnaping.

John D. Helps Fair With His Presence

ORMOND, Fla., March 2.—(AP.)—John D. Rockefeller, Sr., did his share yesterday toward making the annual Ormond street fair a success when he spent the greater part of the afternoon at the grounds, talking with old friends and acquaintances.

It was the first public appearance the 92-year-old philanthropist has made this winter, and many with whom he chatted said he appeared in better health than ever before.

73 New Cases Put Under Quarantine

The City Department of Health today reports these new cases in quarantine: Scarlet fever, 20; diphtheria, 1; chickenpox, 4; whooping cough, 17; mumps, 13, and pneumonia, 18.

Estranged Husband Posts Actress' Bond

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 2.—(AP.)—Esther Muir, film actress, was arrested here yesterday on a charge of refusing to return an electric refrigerator after becoming delinquent in payments. She said she couldn't return the refrigerator because it had been stolen from her home.

Onion Sale Nets $50 For Cox Relief Fund

The Burkeley Produce Company today sold the first sack of the Texas onion crop to be received here before the Pittsburgh Independent Fruit Auction—with the proceeds going to Father James R. Cox's relief fund. Bidding started at $30 and closed at $50, with Thomas Blaciwood, purchasing agent for the P. H. Butler Company, as the buyer.

McKees Rocks Man Wins Damage Boost

Thomas Jurgovitch, of McKees Rocks, was awarded a verdict of $10,000 damages against Allegheny County for two lots and a 12-room brick apartment house in McKees Rocks taken for the McKees Rocks-North Side Bridge approach in his appeal to Common Pleas Court from a $5,500 award by viewers.

Sympathy for Lindy Calms Berlin Rows

BERLIN, March 2.—(INS.)—A wave of sympathy in Germany over the Lindbergh kidnaping today cooled political passions arising from the presidential election campaign.

All Berlin newspapers published the kidnaping on their front pages, along with numerous photographs, an extraordinary occurrence in this country where political issues invariably occupy all available front page space even when an election campaign is not in progress.

STATES TO ACT ON 'LAME DUCK' CONGRESS

Amendment Ratified by Senate, House; League Court Problem Debated

WASHINGTON, March 2. — (AP.) — Congressional action was completed today on the constitutional amendment to abolish "lame duck" sessions of Congress.

As the House did yesterday, the Senate adopted the conference report adjusting differences between the two branches. The amendment now goes to the states for ratification.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee today began consideration of American adherence to the League Court, but a vote was deferred until next week.

It adopted unanimously a reservation offered by Senator Reed (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, reaffirming the controversial stand of the United States that the League Court cannot render an advisory opinion on a question in which this government has or claims to have an interest without first obtaining the consent of America.

Meanwhile the Senate relief bill to turn over 40,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat to the Red Cross for needy people and starving livestock was given legislative right of way today in the House by the Rules Committee.

DRY FOES SEEK SHOWDOWN

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(AP.)—Anti-prohibition organizations concentrated efforts today upon obtaining a real showdown in the promised House vote, March 14, on a motion to consider the plan for a state liquor control amendment to the Constitution.

The success of the House anti-dry bloc in obtaining 145 signatures to the petition, which will force the issue, was the signal for the drive.

The Association Against the Prohibition Amendment immediately announced it will work from now until election day for all supporters of a popular vote on prohibition, and against its opponents. The Crusaders, another anti organization, warned it would consider a dry every representative who fails to cast his vote to bring the resolution before the House.

Wife Killing Suspect Marries Witness

WEWOKA, Okla., March 2. — (AP.)—The marriage of W. L. Scott, free on bond on charges of slaying his wife, and Mrs. Mabel Clour, once held as the state's principal witness, was announced by Otis Presson, Seminole County attorney.

Presson said the marriage would force him to rebuild the state's case as the law provides a man's wife may not testify against him.

cause they are too full of "imagery of blood."

Charles Wesley, eighteenth child of Samuel Wesley, brother of John Wesley, wrote several thousand hymns. One rejected, has these two lines:

"The pains, the groans, the dying strife
Fright our approaching souls away."

Another, by Isaac Watts, has this verse:

"To the blest fountain of thy blood
Incarnate God, I fly;
Here let me wash my spotted soul
From crimes of deepest dye."

The Methodists feel that hyms of this kind do not appeal to young people of today. Nevertheless, things will not seem the same with the old hymns gone. At prayer meetings in the old Jackson schoolhouse of Fanwood, N. J., the small gathering felt that religion was serious, when David Hand, and all his children, joined with Ashley Grace, Gracie Beck, Mr. Hall and the others in singing:

"Alas, and did my Saviour bleed, and did my sovereign die?
"Would he devote that sacred head for such a worm as I?"

CONGRESS WANTS to learn about methods in Wall street, particularly about "short selling," which means selling stocks that you do not own in the hope that they will drop in price, and let you make a profit on the purely gambling transaction. It is suggested that the examination will embarrass certain prominent Wall street "shorts," and that they are fearful and annoyed.

HOWEVER, WALL STREET is a business, and no business, properly conducted, should have any reason to fear investigation. Short selling has, hitherto, been legal, therefore no disgrace attaches to it.

It is possible, however, that Congress may do something to make it not legal, or, at least, much less convenient.

Fireman Acquitted On Ballot Charge

Michael Cooper, McKees Rocks fireman, tried in Criminal Court on a charge of violating the election laws at the September primary, was acquitted by a jury today before Visiting Judge J. A. McLaughry. The prosecutor, Leon Riordan, investigator for the Independent party, was ordered to pay costs.

Ilean Kinsley Weds Virgil Oliver, Actor

LOS ANGELES, March 2—(AP)—Ilean Gertrude Kinsley, film actress, and Virgil K. Oliver, actor, were married here yesterday by Justice of Peace H. E. Billings.

EXPOSE HINTED IN SLAYING

INDIANA, Pa., March 2.—"Surprising developments" within two days were promised here today by County Detective Harry E. Kozer, who with State Troopers George Kearcher and John O'Mara, is investigating the killing of pretty Ruth Stewart, 23, and the wounding of her husband, Wilfred Stewart, 22.

Kozer talked with Stewart, in Indiana Hospital, and said, that Stewart was unable to help the investigation. The small diary left by Mrs. Stewart also failed to furnish clues, Kozer said.

Troopers said search for the automobile which had been parked without lights near the Stewart service station in Whisky Run where the young people were struck with shotgun slugs, was futile.

Neither the county detective nor the troopers would tell what made them so confident of reaching a solution.

McGovern Continues Drive to Aid Pinchot

County Commissioner C. C. McGovern continued his campaign to aid Gov. Pinchot's plans to control the Republican state committee by putting two more candidates in the field. They are Adolph Mayer, Jr., of the Twenty-fourth Ward, representing the Forty-second Senatorial District and Mrs. Chalfant Miller, of Wilkinsburg, representing the Forty-fourth District.

McGovern also set up yesterday two alternate delegates to the Republican national convention to further Pinchot's plans. They are J. Clifford Franz, of the Twenty-sixth Ward, representing the Thirtieth Congressional District and Horace Rutherford, of Tarentum, representing the Thirty-first District.

Chinese Army Flees as Japs Smash Lines

It is a curious sight, sitting here on the roof of the hotel that houses International News Service correspondents and watching Nipponese troops in their methodical deliberate advance.

Enormous fires are burning in the Chapei district adjoining the International Settlement and for some distance to the north.

Apparently the North Station, center of Chinese resistance for three weeks, is in Japanese hands, but the smoke is so thick it is impossible to make out what the exact position is in Chapei.

The whole district, however, is believed to be in Japanese hands.

Gen. Tsai Ting-Kai, commander of the Nineteenth Route Army, moved his headquarters to Nanziang two weeks ago.

If this line fails the Chinese intend to withdraw to their third line based on Soochow.

The Japanese carried out their threat to bomb railways over which the Chinese were receiving reinforcements. Their bombing planes this morning destroyed the tracks between Shanghai and Quinsan and also near Kashing.

MANY KILLED

Japanese military headquarters announced tonight that 1,800 Chinese dead had been counted in abandoned positions.

Japanese losses last night and today were set at 60 killed and 340 wounded.

In one hamlet alone the Japanese reported they found 200 Chinese dead.

Japanese transport ships carrying 30,000 troops were reliably reported to have arrived in Shanghai waters today.

The Japanese are advancing on Woosung village and Woosung fort from the vicinity of Liuho, where they disembarked about 10,000 men. The defenders of Woosung appear to be cut off.

Shanghai Concerned Over Sino-Soviet Link

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

SHANGHAI, March 2.—China's implied threat to stretch out her hand to Moscow for help, now that the League of Nations has failed, today created concern and anxiety in foreign circles here.

Diplomatic and consular circles are thoughtful when discussing the national government's decision to ask the central executive council when it convenes at Loyang tomorrow to approve immediate resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia.

Fear is expressed that the resumption of Sino-Russian diplomatic relations at a time when Russia is under tremendous pressure and China is desperate from Japanese aggression could easily lead to something closer than ordinary diplomatic intercourse. It is pointed out that should China come under Russian influence, as all but happened in 1927, Japan will have done the world a poor service.

News that Nanking and Moscow lean together and that America is concentrating all naval strength in the Pacific was the outstanding feature in the Chinese press today. Nanking's decision is greeted with approval in all Chinese quarters.

What has startled foreigners is the open advocacy not only of resumed relations with Moscow, but also of a Sino-Russian alliance by members of some of the richest families in Shanghai.

Madame Sun Yat Sen, who, as widow of the founder of the Chinese republic, still has great political influence among the masses, openly advocates an alliance with Russia.

PAYROLL PROBE ARREST HINTED

Public Works Director Edward G. Lang's probe into charges of alleged padded payrolls on emergency relief work last spring, was being continued today. Lang hinted he may place a former employe of the department under arrest, but would not divulge the suspect's identity. He said:

"I want to continue my private investigation before I issue a report. Full details will be given at that time."

Payroll padding was indicated by a secret audit instituted by Controller James P. Kerr.

Two laborers, Walter E. Thorns, of 1105 Fairdale street, and Peter Zirbinski, according to Lang, gave Lang affidavits that they had been paid meager sums for work, although records disclosed they had received $620.

Children Should Not Stop Romance of Older Folks

We've heard plenty about the kids having a right to live their own lives; but how about Mom and Pop?

Suppose Mom or Pop finds it dreary going down the years alone after the kids are raised and out on their own; and then suppose Pop or Mom finds someone to share the loneliness, someone to be a comrade along the rest of the trail.

Have they, then, the right to take their happiness, or should they stop to consider "what the children might think?"

And if the children "would throw duck fits" at the thought of Mom or Pop marching up to the altar with a new mate, should they meekly do as son and daughter say?

"Lonely Mother" would like to know, and I'll bet she isn't the only one.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I wonder if you would try to help me with some of your good advice. I hope you will, for I am very unhappy as things are, and I want a home of my own again.

"I am a widow, 62 years old, with three sons and one daughter. My boys are all married and my daughter, 23, is single. I have lost all the money I had after raising my children, so now I go from one home to the other, helping my daughter-in-law and then back to keep house for my daughter.

"I love all my children and they seem to love me, but not one of them ever seems to think that I get tired or should possibly feel sick. When I have a cold or comp'n in any way about how I feel, they just simply ignore it, and no matter how badly I feel I keep going. Sometimes it is very hard to do.

MET WIDOWER

"I have three grandchildren. They are sweet and lovely, but they think I must wait on them at every turn, and there are times when they are very sassy. I often think it is because they know my money is gone and I am living on whatever is given me by their parents.

"Now I have met a gentleman who has been a widower for six months and who is as lonely as I am. He fell in love with me and I with him. Some friends of mine, who know him well, say he is a fine man and was good to his wife until she passed away. He has a good position and he told me that he loved me and wanted to marry me.

"I want to say 'yes,' but I wouldn't dare tell my children I had an offer of marriage, or ever thought of having a home of my own again. My children have never seen him. I never dared bring him to my home, as my daughter would have fits.

SHOULD HAVE HOME

"He has five children, too, and he says they would feel the same way, but he says that if we just slip off and get married all of them will get over it, even if they are shocked at first.

"What do you think we should do? Don't you think it is selfish of the children to feel that way? Why shouldn't we have our own home and not be so lonely? I truly do love him. He is 65. Should we go ahead and be married, in spite of the children?" "Lonely Mother."

Should you marry him? Why not, my dear? After all, your lives don't belong to those children of yours. They belong to you. And there is no reason why you shouldn't have that home, where you can rest and enjoy each other's company, if you want it.

Get up your spunk and step out for yourself, and may you have many years of happiness in that new home!

That's my answer, stranger. What's yours?

Do you think the old folks have a right to a sunset romance? Or do you think they should just hang around their children's homes and do the chores that no one else wants to do?

When Young Things Impress Us as Wonderful or Most Tragic, Says Fay King

IM THE HAPPIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD
A BOX OF CANDY!
ALL THIS WILL SEEM SO SILLY TO YOU IN A FEW YEARS
AN UNANSWERED LETTER
I WISH I WERE DEAD!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

When we are very young everything is extreme.

It either impresses us as being the most wonderful thing in the world, or the most tragic.

If it rains on the Sunday we had plans for a happy outing—nothing could be more tragic.

If we have a gay day and all is merry, it is the crescendo of content.

If we fall in love with some pretty girl or handsome boy, it is the love of a lifetime, and when there is a quarrel there is nothing worth living for.

Look about you and you will see the world is full of people long past their teens. They have lived through all that and laugh now to remember.

And so will you, my dear!

Dicky and Madge Have a Charming Dinner

Dicky rubbed his hands approvingly as he saw the first course of the dinner Katie was laying upon the table in my room. Tomato cocktail, made from a recipe she and I had concocted, is a favorite of his, and he is also very fond of the iced and jellied chicken broth which she was serving with toasted, salted crackers.

Katie finished arranging the silver, china and glass, not forgetting a tiny vase with a spray of half opened roses in it, then she looked reproachfully at us.

From my dressing table, where I had gone to arrange my hair, I smiled reassuringly at my faithful little maid.

"We'll be there in a minute, Katie," I said.

"What's the matter, Katie?" Dicky asked, "afraid the iced soup will get cold?"

Katie's anxious face relaxed.

She giggled again. "Oo-oo! You sooch foony man, Meester Graham."

"Yes," Dicky said, "but I never dare to be as funny as I can." He pointed with a wink at me, but Katie took his declaration in good faith.

"Dot's vun goot ting," she gurgled. "Eef you eny foonier dan you are now, Meester Graham, I chust die laffing."

"Then you'd better hurry out of the door, pronto," Dicky commanded, "for I feel terribly funny this evening, and I surely don't want to lose you."

"All right, I hurry," Katie rejoined with another giggle, "but you please get all foony tings said before I coom back."

She hurried away and we heard her chuckling as she closed the door.

"You may not be a hero to your valet, Dicky," I said smilingly—

"But I certainly am a runner-up for Charley Chaplin, in Katie's eyes," Dicky replied. "But we are wasting time discussing the risibles of admiring housemaids. Let's sample the menu!"

He pulled back the chair and put me into it, with the debonair courtesy which is his. We ate and drank appreciatively and were ready for Katie when she came up with the main course of our dinner. Fricasseed chicken with biscuit, in the gravy, new potatoes, tender wax beans, corn on the cob, crisp white radishes and a combination salad of every green vegetable were on her trays. Jim's garden with his poultry yard had furnished everything on the table but the biscuit.

"I got do fool stuff for dessert dot has peach on top," Katie announced, as she uncovered our plates, "so save some room."

"I suspect she means a Peche Melba," I said, smilingly.

"Of course," Dicky said with a chuckle. "If Katie is going to die laughing at me, we'll probably be buried in a double grave, for she sure's going to be the death of me. But, I say, isn't this bully dining together alone like this? When have we had a tete-a-tete dinner before?"

"Not since we were first married, except in a restaurant," I said.

"Which doesn't count," Dicky answered. "Why can't we do this often, say, once a week, anyway? I'd be willing to slip Katie an extra buck for every time she served the dinner up here."

"It would be lovely," I said, and was conscious that my tone was wistful. For I knew, as did Dicky, if he would but admit it, that it would be an impossible thing for us to have dinner in our room away from the family once a week. I could visualize my mother-in-law's disapproval, my father's disappointment, and the wails of Junior and Roderick should we attempt such an innovation.

"No, I suppose it wouldn't do," Dicky said, reading my thoughts, "but it would be mighty nice just the same. We don't see half enough of each other."

Simple words, and yet fraught with such magic to drive away bitterness. As I heard them, all the vague resentment which had been mine because of Dicky's inadvertent mention of Edith Fairfax slipped away and I felt at peace with Dicky and all the world.

"I'll subscribe to that," I said earnestly.

"I suppose we'd better grasp all the chances to be together, that we can," he said soberly, "for if you make the success as a playwright that seems in the offing, I fancy our moments together, without interruption, will be few and far between."

"Dicky!" I said, protesting wildly, but something in my heart told me that he was speaking the bitter truth. Protest as I might, try as I might, I knew that literary success on my part would subtract materially from the time I could devote to my husband.

"You know it's true, girlie, as well as I do," Dicky said, "but don't think I'm doubling for the dog in the manger. You don't kick because my work doesn't let me spend more time with you, and you're also entitled to your place in the sun. Don't think I'm not proud of my brilliant wife or that I am not glad for the sake of the children, who, when they are old enough will have some literary heritage, or I miss my guess, but—I can't explain—but—this doesn't mean we're going to drift away from each other, does it?

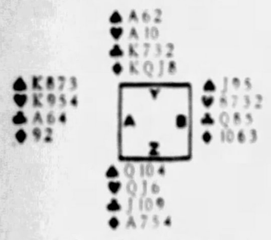
OFFICIAL SYSTEM As Adopted by Leading Authorities

By E. V. SHEPARD

An Instructive Hand

It is always a pleasure to sit back of a player whose strategy and technique are flawless. It is almost as good as a lesson from an ordinary teacher. The following simple hand afforded several points of interest.



Y made a third hand opening bid of 1-Diamond; although he has four guarded suits, he considered it better strategy to make a low suit bid than to jump at once into no-trump upon a 4-4-3-2 distribution. B passed. Z bid 1-No Trump, which Y jumped into 3-No Trumps. The opening lead was the 4 of hearts. Y's 10 won the trick. B started a "plain suit echo," to show his four hearts, by playing his second highest card of the suit (the 7) under dummy's winner. A count of tricks showed only one certain spade trick, two hearts, probably two clubs, and four certain diamond tricks. The short suits in both declarer's hand and in dummy made it appear as if neither adversary held any long suit, but that was by no means certain; possibly A held six hearts originally. A discard or two might make things clearer, so the declarer ran off his four diamond tricks.

A showed out upon the third round of diamonds, discarding the 3 of spades, followed on the fourth round by the 4 of clubs. That did not give much information. Upon the fourth round of diamonds, B discarded his 3 of hearts—the first definite bit of news gathered—showing that B held four of his partner's suit.

Of course clubs offered the second best suit for the declarer to lead, so he won the fourth diamond trick with his Ace, to put himself in position for a lead of his J of clubs towards dummy's K, hoping to trap the missing Q. Letting the J run, the trick was won by B's Q. The 8 of hearts was returned, causing the dummy's Ace to fall, and giving A in possession of two good hearts.

A small club from dummy put A in the lead with his Ace. He garnered his two heart tricks, while Y stripped down to solid winners by discarding his two low spades. Just game was made.

The hand below was opened by Z with the "official" demand bid of 3-Diamonds. A overcalled with 3-Spades, Y passed, B bid 4-Spades, Z shifted into 5-hearts. A bid 5-Spades. Coming into action, Y bid 6-Hearts; B bid 6-Spades; both Z and A passed, but Y doubled, thinking that his partner would win the first diamond trick and then allow Y to trump a return lead. Before tomorrow, see if A can fulfill his contract.

THE STORY OF JOHN N. GARNER

By George Rothwell Brown

(Copyright 1932, by Universal Service, Inc. All Rights Reserved.)

CHAPTER XI.

When the effort to divert John N. Garner into the chairmanship of the Committee on Foreign Affairs had failed, the issue was thrown into the Democratic caucus.

Garner emerged from this grand council of his party with more votes for a place on Ways and Means than were received by any other candidate. He now turned his attention toward carrying out a definite platform pledge, upon which his party had been returned to power in executive and legislative branches, the revision of the tariff.

He played a conspicuous part in committee, in framing the Underwood-Simmons tariff law, which in due season superseded the Payne-Aldrich law which had contributed so largely to Mr. Taft's failure to succeed himself in the White House, and to the election of Woodrow Wilson as President.

Under the new system of organization in the House, under the Democratic formula which had supplanted the despotism of the Reed and Cannon regimes, Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, was not only chairman of Ways and Means, but the floor leaders, and the Ways and Means Committee was not merely the fiscal committee of the House, charged with responsibility for all bills to raise revenue, but it was the policy committee of the Democratic majority, charged with responsibility for all party programs in the House. Thus Garner, as a member of that committee, functioned in a dual role. It gave him a magnificent training in leadership.

An amusing exchange of pleasantries occurred while the tariff bill was under discussion in 1913, which revealed Garner's sense of humor, and his ability to take—and give—a joke.

Now, there are lots of mohair goats in the Fifteenth Texas district, and Garner has looked after that goat industry with a jealous eye. It means a lot to his people. So, when the Underwood bill was seen to contain a few kind thoughts for goats, J. Hampton Moore, now the Mayor of Philadelphia, but who was then in the House, rose to his feet one day and convulsed everybody by reading a little poem entitled "Garner's Goat of Texas."

Laugh Is on Garner

The laugh was on Garner. It was generally admitted that Hampie Moore's literary effort was the best poem on goats which had delighted the sensitive ear of the House of Representatives since that day, many years before, when Private John Allen, of Mississippi, under somewhat similar circumstances, had burst into song:

"Mary had a little lamb,
It's fleece was white as snow;
It followed her to Pittsburgh, one day.
And look at the damn thing now."

Life in Congress is not all seriousness. The man who can give and take a pleasantry goes farther than one who has no sense of humor. Nothing amuses Garner to this day more than a recitation of Hampie Moore's doggerel.

Finally Garner had the satisfaction of voting for the completed Underwood act, which, with the addition of the name of Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, eventually became the law, by President Wilson's signature. Thus was this party pledge fulfilled.

During the next session Garner frequently presided over the House, obtaining a most valuable knowledge of the machinery of government of that large and unwieldy body. He also acquired a helpful psychological insight into the minds of his colleagues. He came, in the end, to know the House better, perhaps, than any other man in it, on the Democratic side.

When the fateful time came and America was plunged into the World War on the side of the Allies, he was one of the best equipped men on either side of the House, a tower of strength to Speaker Clark. In the War Congress he was a leader.

The Two-Thirds Rule

Champ Clark had been deprived of the Democratic nomination for President at the Baltimore convention, in 1912, although he had had a majority of the votes. The two-thirds rule ultimately defeated him. Between him and President Wilson there was a coolness perfectly understandable under the circumstances. Wilson's relations with Claude Kitchin, of North Carolina, then chairman of Ways and Means, were no more cordial. They were, indeed, hostile.

During the long days of the costly war, President Wilson called repeatedly upon Garner for advice and assistance. This was on the suggestion of Postmaster General Burleson, a fellow Texan, who had served with him in the House, and knew his man. The relationship of Wilson and Garner in this period was exceedingly confidential. There were times when Garner saw the President at the White House every day, when he was one of the few men, of either party, who did see him. What transpired at these conferences is Garner's secret and will go to the grave with him.

It is certainly no betrayal of a confidence, however, to say that through the medium of these conferences, the President and the House of Representatives were enabled to function together for the single purpose of winning the war.

Talent for Friendship

This delicate and intimate relationship was possible because of Garner's talent for making and keeping friends, and for keeping out of quarrels between mutual friends. His close contacts with President Wilson did not cost him the friendship of Champ Clark. Garner's friends declare that one of the most noticeable of all his characteristics is his complete aloofness from the quarrels of others. He has never been drawn into them.

With his party, he supported the President in all the war measures. As a member of the Ways and Means Committee he played a conspicuous part in financing the war, in raising the thousands of millions of dollars necessary for the armed forces of the country.

By these war days he had advanced on Ways and Means until he was fifth from the top, having climbed from near the bottom. When the Republicans returned to power in the House in 1919, he remained on the committee, and rendered valuable service to his party, and to the country, by the ceaseless fight he made, at every step, to keep the new Republican tariff bill within bounds.

The day that bill was completed Chairman Fordney, of the committee, whose name it was to bear, said to him: "Jack, your picture is on every page of this bill."

Garner's efforts had been to keep the rates down, to safeguard the interests of as large a part of the masses of the people as possible.

Council Pays $78 'Moral' Claim of Injured Boy

Absence of an attendant employed at the Bloomfield Playgrounds last summer when he should have been on duty cost the city $78.50 in accident damage claims, Council decided yesterday.

J. B. Harrison told Council his minor son, Jack, had been injured when struck by an older boy during a playground session, necessitating the victim's removal to a hospital. Harrison said:

"If the attendant had been on duty, the accident would never have happened."

"This is a moral claim. It should be paid."

Mr. Lissfelt will scarcely be expected to mention the social side of yesterday's Tuesday Musical meeting in his review today, so here's a word concerning one of the most charmingly appointed teas the club has ever had. The Twentieth Century Club dining room looked its most attractive and at three very long tables, where service was largely buffet, the urns were presided over by Mrs. H. Talbot Peterson, Mrs. Sidney A. Chalfant, Mrs. Martha Meyers Murdock, Mrs. Roy S. Porter, Mrs. William A. Wrenshaw and Mrs. H. O. Whipple. Clusters of yellow calendula centered the tables. More than 900 persons heard the lovely program and stayed for tea. Most of the singers came up in costume and were the recipients of all sorts of congratulations as were Mrs. Dallmeyer Russell and Mrs. Jacob Simpson Payton, who arranged the program and Mrs. Elmer W. Flaccus, who has the good judgment to be president of such an entertaining organization.

It's true, madam,

Dishwashing is the hardest part of marriage

BUT see how much easier it is with the New Oxydol

● Those times when it seems you just can't face another pile of dirty dishes—why not make it easier for yourself?

Use the New Oxydol. See what rich, creamy suds it makes—50% more suds. See how those thick suds cut the grease—and rinse off so dishes are sparkling clean, so there's no scum left.

Lively, long lasting suds that don't fizzle away are the secret of all easy washing—clothes as well as dishes. That's why Oxydol's richer, more lasting suds do more for you—whisk grease away like a flash, float dirt out of clothes and hold it out.

Yet Oxydol is safe—easy on hands and dainty things. It makes clean-smelling suds in the hardest water—and all water turns hard when you add dirty clothes or greasy dishes. You'll bless the day you learned its name.

ACCUSE SUICIDE IN TAX AUDIT

County Delinquent Tax Collector John Brown, Jr., today disclosed a shortage in the accounts of L. R. Mechling, former deputy collector, of Wilkinsburg, who ended his life by hanging himself two weeks ago, had been uncovered by auditors, but that he had not learned the amount. He said:

"I have been advised Mechling's accounts show a shortage, but I do not know the amount. I have written the County Commissioners asking for the detailed report of Main & Co. on the Mechling books. I also have notified the American Surety Company, his bondsman."

Mechling had failed to return a complete report for delinquent taxes for 1929, Brown asserted.

MUSIC

Tuesday Musical Club

The Tuesday Musical Club offered its annual Opera Program on the stage of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday afternoon before a capacity audience. Wolf-Ferrari's "Secret of Suzanne" and Ponchielli's "La Giaconda" furnished the material for this year's show under the direction of Mrs. Romaine Smith Russell and Mrs. Jacob Simpson Payton.

Mr. Lissfelt

It was as smooth running as any performance of its kind, and plainly showed good direction and much rehearsal. Against a background of black velvet curtains the operas were sung in somewhat tabloid form, the costuming being particularly effective in this setting. The Wolf-Ferrari opera was rather the more difficult since its entire spirit is most delicate comedy and requires most experienced actors. Frank Kennedy, who had not a note to sing, did a fine portrait in "Sante" the mute servant. Regina Spilker Linn sang the "Countess Suzanne" and Robert Owrey the "Count Gil."

"La Giaconda" is full of star parts for vocalists. The cast was as follows: "La Giaconda," Martha Eaton Brickman; "La Cieca," Viola K. Byrgerson; "Laura," Carolyn Hunt Mahaffey; "Enzo," Vincent Kroen; "Barnaba," Max Kroen; "Alvise," Cass Ward Whitney.

Marion Clark Bollinger was accompanist for both operas, and the Tuesday Musical Club's String Ensemble, under the capable leadership of Mrs. Ruth Thoburn, offered two charming contributions in the Overture to the "Secret of Suzanne" and the "Dance of the Hours," from "La Giaconda."

J. FRED LISSFELT.

SUSPECT SHOWS JUDGE'S NOTE

A letter, supposedly written by Judge Harry H. Rowan, was offered in evidence in Central Police Court today by George Walker, 22, of Oakmont, when he was arraigned on charges of stealing a pocketbook containing $23 from the office of Margaret Hays, buyer in a downtown store.

The letter was addressed to the Brinks Express Company and recommended Walker for a position as a driver of a money wagon, police said. It described Walker's character as being "above reproach."

Walker, who was captured after a chase through the store and down Oliver avenue to Wood street, admitted taking the purse, but said it was his first offense, police declared. He was held over and the letter was sent to Judge Rowan with a report of the case.

EAGLE PADLOCK ORDER REVERSED

Dry Agents' Subterfuge Denounced by U. S. Judges

PHILADELPHIA, March 2.—(AP.)—Methods of prohibition agents whose raids led to padlocking of seven Eagle lodges in Western Pennsylvania were denounced by judges of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday in reversing a padlock order imposed by the Federal Court at Pittsburgh last June.

Two prohibition agents used lodge membership cards bearing fictitious names to gain entry to the lodge rooms, where they allegedly bought beer and liquor and later obtained search warrants on which raids were conducted.

This subterfuge was denounced by Judge Warren Davis, former Baptist minister, and Judge Victor B. Cooley, of Wilmington, Del., as "unethical and illegal." Judge Joseph Buffington, senior member of the court, filed a dissenting opinion.

The padlocked lodges are at Pittsburgh, Johnstown, Altoona, New Kensington and three other places not named in the papers filed here. They were ordered padlocked for a year by Federal Judge Nelson McVicar in Pittsburgh.

An appeal was brought by Attorney David P. MacQuarrie before the Circuit Court of Appeals here, making the case against the New Kensington lodge a test for all seven.

Lion Recaptured After Circus Bolt

NAPOLEON, O., March 2.—(AP.)—A large and sociable circus lion that threw an entire countryside into panic late yesterday when it escaped from its cage, was recaptured and safe on its way to Peru, Ind., today.

The lion was recaptured after it had taken refuge from its pursuers in a barn on the farm of Peter Walters. Police and deputies, armed with guns and tear gas, surrounded the barn, but the lion returned to its cage without coaxing after the cage had been placed against the barn door.

SUDDEN CHANGE TO COMPLEXION BEAUTY
AMAZED THEIR FRIENDS

Thousands of women no longer fear the results of constipation. For years their skin was dull and sallow. Pimples, blotches and blemishes marred every chance of beauty. But not any more.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers worked their wonders for them. Gentle internal cleansers—they quickly help to remove the cause: intestinal stasis and poisonous wastes that dull the eye, blotch the skin and stupefy the mind and personality.

A five day test of Stuart's Calcium Wafers will often work a wondrous change: soft, silken skin clear and free from faults! Bright, sparkling eyes! Alert and vigorous in mind and body! No wonder that so many thousands of people find that an occasional sugar-coated Calcium Wafer (Stuart's) is all the tonic that they need.

Young Shakespearean Actor Steps Out as Garbo's Leading Man

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1932, by King Features Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, March 2.

Down in Georgia, they'll be glad to hear that Melvyn Douglas, a Macon boy, is progressing nicely towards stardom.

Mr. Douglas, who used to act Shakespeare in the Middle-West or wherever he could get a job, is now to reach every leading man's goal, a chance to play opposite Greta Garbo. He'll be with her in the Luigi Pirandello drama, "As You Desire Me." In this same cast will be Eric Von Stroheim and several other well-known players.

Greta Garbo

Of course you know by now that Melvyn Douglas is married—since last April—to the graceful Helen Gahagan, co-star with him in the Belasco production of "Tonight or Never." Later on, Mr. Douglas played the same role with Gloria Swanson on the screen.

This young actor is under contract to Samuel Goldwyn, who continues to be as good as any of them in picking star material.

HERE'S GOSSIP

The gambling ships anchored off the California coast have a new wrinkle. They furnish free dinners to guests.

The other evening a complete Hollywood wedding party was entertained in this way. Of course, the guests are expected to make it up at the tables. These ships, by the way, don't sell liquor . . . Joan Crawford used to bicycle in the early morning privacy of Brentwood. Then one day she looked around and there, a polite 20 feet behind her, she saw 20 little girls from a nearby school, peddling along in silent but absorbed pursuit . . .

Joan Crawford

If you know your studios, the phrase "weather permitting" becomes a familiar sight on the daily call-sheets. It means that the company will be working at a certain spot unless rain or cloudy skies prevent it. But today the M. G. M. call-sheet on "Strange Interlude" read "blossoms permitting." The solution of this mystery, I discover, is that Director Robert Leonard wants to get a shot of an almond orchard in bloom, and nobody knows just when the blossoms will pop out. Each morning they do, the studio will be notified and this location has first call over all others.

Films Listed For Local Showing

Charles (Buddy) Rogers, one of the stars of Florenz Ziegfeld's new musical comedy hit, "Hot-Cha," and Paul Lukas, one of the screen's leading romantic actors, have the leading roles opposite Judith Wood and Dorothy Hall in "Working Girls," a talking screen adaptation of the stage play, "Blind Mice," booked to open a week's engagement in the Fulton Theater tomorrow. Stuart Erwin and Frances Dee are also in the cast.

The Stanley for one week beginning Friday will offer a vaudeville bill on the stage. Lew Ayres and Mae Clarke will be on the screen in "The Impatient Maiden."

BARRYMORE STARRED

Phillips Holmes, who is still in his twenties, brings his thirteenth screen characterization to the public in "Broken Lullaby," coming Friday to the Penn. In spite of his youth, Holmes is a seasoned veteran in point of experience. Holmes has a heritage for acting, gained from his father, Taylor Holmes, who has been a favorite of the stage for many years, and, at less frequent intervals, of the screen. Nancy Carroll plays opposite Holmes in "Broken Lullaby." Lionel Barrymore is starred.

William Powell is seen as a slick, fast-thinking promoter in "High Pressure," coming Friday to the Warner. George Sidney and Evalyn Knapp also are in the cast.

MYSTERY COMING

"Taxi," starring James Cagney, opens today in the Enright. "The Silent Witness," mystery play, with Lionel Atwill and Greta Nissen, is booked to open Saturday in the Enright and Friday in the Davis.

Edna May Oliver and Roscoe Ates are featured in the laugh film, "Ladies of the Jury," coming Saturday to the Harris. Buck Jones also will be seen in "One Man Law."

OTHER BOOKINGS

"Der Kleine Seitensprung," which means "slightly indiscreet," will open in the Avenue Cinema Monday. It is a comedy with music and the story involves two matrimonial tangles.

"Flying High," starring Bert Lahr, opens on the Sheridan Square screen today. Robert Montgomery's starring film, "Lovers Courageous," will come to that theater Saturday.

"Personalities," a burlesque show in two acts and 32 scenes, with new cast of principals, will open for a week's engagement in the Academy with a Midnight show Sunday night.

Vaudeville Revue for Stanley Stage

Beginning Friday the Stanley will present a vaudeville revue in eight acts. Heading the bill will be Al K. Hall with Al K. Hall, Jr., in "double distilled spirits of comedy." Charles Hill, Laura Hoffman, 12 Lia Zeed Arabs, the Slate Brothers, and Carlton Emmy and his madwags. It does not represent a change of policy and will be presented for one week only.

Stars of Radio on Bill In Alvin Tonight

The brightest stars of the Sun-Telegraph's radio station, WCAE, again will entertain audiences in the Alvin Theater tonight. Among those who will appear are Riggs and Moke, Paul Gannon, Charlotte Shallenberger, Ray Griffin, the Lawson sisters and numerous others.

Plays and Players -:- By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Next week Pittsburgh will be without a legitimate attraction. Both the Nixon and Alvin will be dark. Weeks of that kind have been numerous throughout the season for one house or the other, but the coming one will be the first week since the season opened that both dramatic houses have been dark at the same time.

One of the gags in "Hot-Cha," which now is midway of its second and final week in the Nixon, pertains to a proposal that the entertainers in a cabaret made by Jose Piaz (Robert Glecker), go to Mexico with him. The response is feeble and Buddy Rogers remarks that "it sounds like a Hoover rally." In respect to President Hoover, the line was changed to "Heflin rally" in Washington.

One of the coming Alvin attractions that is sure to be one of the dramatic events of the season, if success elsewhere is a criterion, is the engagement for the week of April 4 of Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," which opened its road tour in Boston with the largest advance sale in recent years and has since been playing to house capacity.

The Community Playhouse, Pasadena, Cal., from which Irving Pichel, Pittsburgh boy, was drafted by the movies, has been raided again, yielding Gloria Stuart, aged 18, an ingenue, who will be a screenie for Universal. . . Chester Morris and Richard Arlen will have the leading roles in "Come On, Marines" . . . Dorothy Mackaill will make her personal appearance debut in a piano and song act . . . Mary Pickford is in New York, where she will be joined by Frances Marion, who is to write Miss Pickford's next screen story . . . Jeanette MacDonald is expected in Hollywood to resume picture work after a lay-off . . . In "A Successful Calamity" George Arliss will be directed by John G. Adolfi, who did the same service for him in "Alexander Hamilton," "The Millionaire" and "The Man Who Played God."

* * *

"I like to be happy and carefree, and make others happy, because, after all, life isn't so terribly long."—Mary Pickford.

Lupe's Debut In 'Hot-Cha'

Lupe Velez will be seen in "Hot-Cha" tonight and throughout the remainder of the engagement here, her first appearance in the part having been decided upon yesterday to take place at this afternoon's matinee performance of the newest Ziegfeld musical success. The exotic Lupe arrived here more than a week ago, and immediately began rehearsal of the part assigned to her, and it was said she has been ready for her debut for several days, the event having been delayed by the non-arrival of costumes.

These Charming People

Chas. Dana Gibson has peddled his Life to Clair Maxwell, et al. . . . The H. L. Matthews, of the Times' Paris Bureau, Are Like That . . . The W-Telly explained that it dropped Al E. Smith's column because "it wouldn't be fair to other Presidential possibilities" . . . Mr. Smith wishes it known it was because he wouldn't accept "such a heavy salary shave" . . . Jeannette MacDonald kept a rendezvous in Chicago during the week-end with her old Milwaukee dep't store heart—and they reconciled . . . Long Island will have a Social Earthquake when Will Irwin's "keyhole-peeping" is magazined in one of the respectable periodicals under the tag: "The North Shore."

The Fred Brunns, of the ad industry, are cradle-shopping . . . Mrs. McClelland Barclay (Helene Haskins) has been Warner Brothered, and the front-cover genius is pining here . . . New York is inviting more ridicule with its soon due "Marathon Sleeping Contest" . . . Fred Astaire's bride is a society divorcee, whose name he doesn't want printed yet . . . Before you can make "Who's Who" you must be recommended by someone in it.

The Broadway amusement temples suffered their worst week in a long spell—even the plays attracting the "rave" notices nose-diving horribly . . . One of the smaller radio chains has a feature called "Chandu," which is Hindu-Chinese for an opium preparation. In fewer words—Dope . . . Ella Hatfield is trousseau-shopping, but won't reveal his tag . . . George D. Fried, the broker, who thinks Broadway is easier to take, is backing a show . . . One wag argues that an egoist is a gal on Times Square who turns around every time she hears a motor car horn toot.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, personal doc to President Wilson, spurned $200,000 for his manuscript on the "real" story about Woodrow . . . Being a Virginian gent, he may publish it privately. . . . Ramon and Rosita will try another, this time with an all-night salon for the so-called smart set . . . The best of the sillier magazines has reduced its ad rate 50 per cent again . . . Will Hays' severest critic, P. S. Harrison, came here from the Old Country christened Spillios . . . On Friday Vincent Youman's creditors held a conference and declared a year's moratorium . . . Lehar and Tauber will star at Roxy's Music Hall in Rockefeller Center. Over 1,000 seats have been sold already for the first performance, although it won't open for at least another year . . . Add Similes: Lodewick Vroom's: Lowdown as a shoplifter in a 5 and 10-Cent Store.

An orchid to the R-K-O executives, now hep to promoters (who take 60 per cent of the gross) in the "benefit" racket. The execs are now Seaburying all Benefit Shows . . . An orchid to the West 48th Street Union Church for its system of feeding hungry players. . . . An orchid to Mr. Soglow for his always comical drawings of the "King" in the New Yorker . . . An orchid to the creator of the "Dorothy Gish Cocktail," viz.: One-third orange and pineapple juice; two-thirds Bacardi; one dash of Apricot Brandy, cracked ice, and Gilda-Gray it plenty.

Mrs. E. W. Du Pont, the attractive divorcee, has a new diversion. She met him at Lake Placid . . . A West 47th street hotel will outfit each room with sun-ray lamps, and no extra tariff . . . When La Guinan is fed up with a person she barks: "I've enough on my mind now! Do I have to start hating you?" . . . The Army of Echoes are recommended to Gus Edwards' newest novelty, an act in vaudeville christened "Radio Understudies"—so adroit and entertaining it simply must be thefted by the desperate-for-an-idea pirates . . . The Buster Murrays and the Thomas Cornells are being stork'd . . . George Jessel's luck (is that what they're calling it?) is sour again . . . His show, which includes Pola Negri, is not Big Time yet.

Ruth Nichols, the aviatrix, who will race Elinor Smith across the Atlantic in May, has "heart" wounds again . . . Bennett is responsible for the probe into the alleged movie combine in Canada. . . . Lindbergh refuses to celebrate any anniversary, his wedding day, his birthday or May 20, the eventful day he leaped to Paree.

Virginia Pope now has the Times' fashion editorship which Gertrude Sayre shelved so she could find more time to adore her husband, Joel . . . A real Anarchist Society uptown is so tough local Communists will have nothing to do with it. They meet in a cellar . . . Jed Harris financed his last casualty by peddling his mortgaged London mansion . . . The Morgan Reichners, of Sutton Pl., are babying . . . The next big merger will take in most of the radio tubes, with RCA doing the gobbling, but marketing them under old trade tags . . . Peggy Andree of the ensembles in the shows is out of circulation and altar-bound . . . Corinne Griffith (Mrs. Walter Morosco) is a social knockout in London, the Prince of Wales attending all her teas . . . The newest Melancholywoodevilment is the Tallulah Bankhead-Joel Macrea combination—and People Are Beginning To Talk . . . BUTLER TO OPPOSE DAVIS FOR U. S. SENATE

POLITICS
Organization Chiefs Selecting Slate
By MARK SHIELDS

Mr. Shields

In Harrisburg today a group of eminent Republican leaders are relieving the rank and file of voters of the onerous duty of making candidates in the primary. The organization chiefs, from Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and throughout the state will select a "slate," and the electorate will be asked to no greater exertion than ratification.

That may seem an odd system, in view of our primary laws, but it is one frequently followed, and the assumption by any group of leaders that they can drive slates through to success is based on lethargy of the voters and their willingness, except for sporadic uprisings, to sign on the dotted line.

There was an uprising of this nature in 1930, when Gov. Pinchot was nominated and then elected. There was another last year, first when County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern was nominated and again when he and Commissioner C. M. Barr were elected in November. But sustained adventure in the interest of independent government is arduous, and on that the organization counts to win more often than it loses.

Those meeting in Harrisburg today are organized. The voters generally are not. Those in session today perfecting a slate have little difficulty agreeing among themselves, doing something which often is tantamount to holding an election. The voters separate into groups and lose the force of their drive, and have no way of getting together in a cohesive group to center on candidates. They diffuse their powers.

To Fight Slate Pinchot Must Run

If this slate, to be selected today, meets opposition worthy of the name, it will be stimulated only through some centralized head, and Gov. Pinchot is the only champion able to furnish that leadership. The Governor cannot furnish opposition merely by picking a slate of names to oppose the organization names.

If the Governor really wants to fight this slate he will have to become a candidate himself. He need not run for the Senate. Probably he could not be successful in that effort this year against Senator James J. Davis. But the Governor could become a candidate for delegate-at-large to the Republican National Convention.

He could draw the issue clearly between pro-Hoover and anti-Hoover sentiment, those now on the delegate slate being conservatives and regulars who will follow the President. With such an issue raised the Governor might have a chance to pull through some of the remainder of an opposition slate. If the Governor is not a statewide candidate he will find difficulty in inflating a ticket of his own.

Senator James J. Coyne is one of the leaders in Harrisburg today. He was not in on the original conference in Philadelphia, which dealt with the status of Judge Joseph Stadtfeld, candidate to remain on the Superior Court bench. The real purpose of Coyne's visit is to confer with Gov. Pinchot, and he was accompanied by Sheriff Frank Gollmar, who was appointed through Coyne influence.

Coyne also will meet the Philadelphians. He is one Allegheny countian who will not have to answer to the Philadelphia charge of treachery in 1930. He was a western manager of the campaign of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy and through that association active for Pinchot. His position was never in doubt.

Coyne Presents Anomaly of Politics

Coyne conferring with both the Governor and the organization, in kindly contact with both, presents again the anomaly of politics, particularly when the facts of his campaign for re-election are considered. He has the activie opposition of Commissioner Barr, colleague of Commissioner McGovern, the Pinchot leader in the county. Yet the Governor, I am sure, wants to see Coyne re-elected, because of the help he has furnished the executive in the past.

A great number of Independents desire the retirement of Coyne, the same Independents who tore their shirts in behalf of Mr. Pinchot when he was a candidate for Governor. The contradictions of politics are a never-ending source of wonder, even to those closely associated with the business.

Here is another example: Coyne, being fought by McGovern's colleague, Barr, in the Forty-third Senatorial District, was expected to give some assistance to McGovern's friend, Ralph Flinn, as a candidate for Congress in the Thirtieth District. It was assumed that Coyne would receive some consideration from the County Board for this aid.

But in his own Senatorial District, in an effort to beat him, it also is assumed that John J. Verona, bitter Coyne foe and Third Ward leader, will receive some comfort from the County Board in return for assisting Barr's desire to see Coyne defeated.

What a cross-tag picture that would have been. It was erased by Flinn's decision not to run when Coyne after due consideration felt that he could not throw in against Congressman Edmund F. Erk, incumbent in the Thirtieth District.

'SWEET VOICES' OF EAST END SELECTED
Task of Judges in WCAE Contest Difficult; Radio Stars Score in Program

Five East End girls were selected last night as winners in the second of a series of auditions sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and Radio Station WCAE in the Alvin Theater this week to find the "girl with the sweetest voice" in Pittsburgh. They are: Mildred Williams, 500 North Negley avenue (No. 16); Ethel Hanly, 518 North Highland avenue (No. 47); Agnes E. O'Neil, 3514 Fifth avenue (No. 122); Helen Keil, Wallace Building, Highland and Center (No. 150), and Mary Gray, 324 Main street (No. 167). More than 200 contestants participated.

DECISION DIFFICULT

Judges were J. King Morris, district traffic superintendent, Bell Telephone Company; James G. Fulton, coach of the Harvard debating team, 1927, and Miss Marjorie Stewart, pioneer KDKA announcer and head of the Microphone Theater. After they had accomplished the difficult task of selecting five winners from the hundreds of voices emanating at regular intervals from the huge loud speaker over the stage.

Miss Stewart said:

"Although it was hard to decide, we tried to choose girls whose voices had impressionable shades of coloring, vitality and a feminine sweetness and charm which indicated very definite types of personalities."

Included in the competition last night was New Gee Lee, 17, petite daughter of a Second avenue tea merchant. She was born in Canton, China, and came to Pittsburgh with her father when she was two years old.

Glorified Girls Talk Of Stage Ambitions
Ziegfeld Girls Not Averse to Telling Likes, Dislikes

"Glorified" or not, these Ziegfeld girls of "Hat-Cha," now playing at the Nixon Theater, prior to its New York premiere, next week, are much like those that you and you and you meet everyday.

Proof? Here it is:

Mary Joan Martin, red-headed and blue-eyed, likes to cook and sew, but fears to be labelled "domestic." A serious youngster of 19, she wants to be a comedienne of the Hester Hoctor type or enter the movies.

Florence Healy, a very blonde little girl from Renova, Pa., would like to be the mother of twins.

Mercedes (Pat) Hughes, a brunette who graduated from the Chester Hale girls, has dancing, swimming and literature for her hobbies and tries "to be happy with the little things in life."

Jane Lane, another of the blondest blondes, only asks that she may fall in love with a single man.

Prudence Edgar, niece of Comedian Bert Lahr, not yet 18 and as pretty a girl as the show boasts, spends her spare time at the movies and wants to play in them some day.

Prudence Edgar

Mina Ruskin, born in South Africa, later lived in Pittsburgh, New Kensington and Franklin, Pa., writes "jingles." likes to dance, picks her company carefully and hopes to some day rival Lenore Ulric.

Gloria Kelly—Kelly despite being born in Berlin—has a yen for caviar and orchids, without reservations.

Theo Holley, from 'way down South, goes in for reading and outdoor sports in a big way and hopes some time to make Bobby Connolly (the Ziegfeld dance director) volunteer praise—then quit and become a full-fledged actress.

Dorothy Kale came to Ziegfeld from Miami night clubs and hopes even being glorified is only a stepping stone to a career on the concert stage, either as a lassical dancer or pianiste.

Senators Take Chance, Talking To Wall St. Men
By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Senate interviewed Wall street shorts yesterday.

That's the first step. Tomorrow the Senators will be interviewed by the Customer's men.

By Friday, the shorts will all have clean bills of health and the Senators will have sick stock certificates.

We could have told the Senators everything about Wall street in an elapsed jiffy.

Don't buy short, don't buy long and don't buy.

The Senators violated the very first law of financial longevity. Don't talk to a broker.

We're speaking from experience. Everything's all right now but we're like the hobo who just went through a long tunnel on a box car.

We may have to go through it all over again if the freight train backs up.

Moon Township Audit Appeal Filed

The supervisors of Moon Township should have been surcharged with several hundred dollars in an auditors' report of township finances filed February 3, it was charged in a taxpayers' appeal from the report filed by Attorney Ralph H. Frank for William Gittins and Reuben F. Zimmerman.

The appeal attacked the report, charging it was not an audit but a mechanical compilation of figures, that the report was prepared by J. H. McCartney, one of the three township supervisors, J. A. Roe, township tax collector, whose accounts were among those to be audited, and Horace Thomas, Jr., attorney for the supervisors, and that it was filed by two township auditors, S. N. Meanor and E. E. Whiteside, without notice to a third auditor, R. C. Hawthorne.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—The possibility of Theodore A. Huntley, secretary to Senator David A. Reed, of Pennsylvania, becoming a candidate for Congress in the forthcoming Pennsylvania Republican primaries was seen today in quiet developments at the capital.

Friends of Huntley are known to be urging him to make the race against Representative Patrick J. Sullivan, of the Thirty-fourth Congressional District, embracing the famous "Strip" district of Pittsburgh. He is expected to announce a decision prior to the date when the filing books close, March 7.

Long a resident of Pittsburgh, Huntley attended school in the "Strip," where he still votes. He has been with Senator Reed as a sort of political secretary for several years, and before that was an active newspaperman. He came to Washington originally as secretary to Representative Guy Campbell, of Pittsburgh.

In the event Huntley makes the race he will do so without organization support, although it is presumed that he will carry the good wishes of Senator Reed.

DIETRICH SEEKS RE-ELECTION

Representative Clayton Dietrich, of the Sixth District, announced today as a candidate for re-election to the Legislature. In his platform he declares for abolition of the Public Service Commission in favor of a Fair Rate Board, repeal of the Snyder enforcement act, repeal of blue laws, increased appropriations for mothers' assistance, old-age pensions, a state soldier bonus and quick relief for the unemployed. In the last regular session Dietrich was active in bringing the blue law question before the House.

George F. Howe, former member from the Eleventh District, also is a candidate to go back to the Legislature. Howe says he will aid in curbing unfair public utilities, and will endeavor to secure legislation permitting employment of Pennsylvanians only on all state and municipal public work. He will support any legislation program indorsed by the Sportsmen's League, and will seek a return to the counties of origin a proportion of motor license fees.

Mrs. Pinchot Given Thrill in Air Ride

CENTRALIA, Pa., March 2.—(AP.)—Mrs. Gifford Pinchot last night gave an audience an "extra added attraction" besides her scheduled lecture on her recent South Sea trip. It was the tale of her hastily-arranged airplane trip from New York, over the Pennsylvania mountains, to Numidia Airport here.

For a while the plane was rocked by high winds and the pilot had trouble finding the airport.

PINCHOT BACKS EX-MARINE ON DRY TICKET
General's Announcement Made by Governor's Aide; Senator for Modification

NEWTOWN SQUARE, Pa., March 2.—(AP.)—Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler will oppose United States Senator James J. Davis for the Republican senatorial nomination in the primary April 26.

Butler's candidacy was announced here today by P. Stephen Stahlnecker, secretary to Gov. Pinchot. Stahlnecker said Butler would have Pinchot's support.

Butler is widely known as a prohibitionist, while Davis recently announced his intention of campaigning for re-election on a platform favoring amendment of the Volstead act to permit sale of per cent beer.

Pinchot, Ill, Delays Harrisburg Return

HARRISBURG, March 2.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot failed to return to Harrisburg today after his discharge yesterday from a New York sanitarium. Assistants at the capital said they did not expect him for the remainder of the week, in spite of the fact that an Allegheny delegation of Republican leaders arrived today for a political conference.

Gov. Pinchot had been a patient at Mrs. Alice Fuller Le Roy's sanitarium, in New York City, but attendants there declined to divulge the nature of his illness, nor how long he had been confined.

Stadtfeld Facing G. O. P. Opposition

By MARK SHIELDS

HARRISBURG, March 2.—Proposal of Allegheny County Republicans that Judge Joseph Stadtfeld shall be slated by the Philadelphia organization and the Republican State Committee as a candidate for the Superior Court was a subject of bitter controversy today at a meeting of political leaders from all sections of the state.

The Stadtfelt cause was supported by W. A. Bonitz, Pittsburgh manufacturer, and Senator James J. Coyne, County Chairman William D. Mansfield was absent because of illness. State Chairman Edward Martin, Philadelphia leaders, and men from interior counties, fought over the Stadtfeld proposition as the only unsettled point of their slate. Backing for Senator Frank Baldwin for Auditor General being unqualified.

In the atmosphere of side-bar conferences there was considerable opposition to Stadtfeld, despite the belief of Pittsburghers who attended last Sunday's conference in Philadelphia that he, rather than Parker, would be supported for Superior Court, along with Judge Robert Gawthrop and former Lieut. Gov. Arthur James.

Pro-Roosevelt Democrats, meeting here to plan their primary campaign in Pennsylvania, will name candidates to oppose State Chairman John Collins and National Committeeman Sedgwick Kistler for delegates-at-large to the national convention.

The executive committee of the Roosevelt League, of which Warren Van Dyke, of Dauphin County, former publicity man for the Democratic State Committee, is chairman, insists that every candidate for delegate shall agree to abide by the primary preference vote for presidential candidates, and this Collins, Kistler, Judge Niles, of York County, and Roland Morris, of Philadelphia, have refused to do.

Three of the four candidates to oppose this quartet have been tentatively selected. Joseph F. Guffey, of Pittsburgh, has declined to be the fourth member of the opposition because of the presence of his sister, Mrs. Carol Miller, on the delegate slate adopted some weeks ago.

ROBERTSON NAMES AIDES IN DRIVE TO SELL 'BABY BONDS'

DUNN TO HEAD CAMPAIGN IN DISTRICT

Thirteen State Regions to Press Sale of U. S. Thrift Securities March 15

A. W. Robertson, Pennsylvania chairman of the Citizens' Reconstruction Organization, this morning announced the personnel of his organization, which will carry out the campaign to bring idle money into circulation in this state beginning next Monday.

Simultaneous with this announcement came word that headquarters had been opened at 2124 Grant Building, which will be in charge of R. S. McCarty, advertising manager of the Philadelphia Company, who was named vice chairman of the state organization.

W. S. Linderman, president of the Duquesne National Bank, has consented to serve as treasurer of the organization.

13 DISTRICTS

The state of Pennsylvania has been divided into 13 regional districts, each district to be headed by a chairman. The campaign in the Pittsburgh district will be under the personal supervision of T. A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, and his district will consist of Pittsburgh and Lawrence, Butler, Armstrong, Beaver, Allegheny, Washington, Greene, Fayette and Westmoreland counties.

The other regional district chairmen who have accepted are E. J. Bigley, Altoona district; Charles H. English, Erie district; P. H. Gadsden, Philadelphia district, and Edgar H. Maitland, Williamsport district.

Mr. Robertson stated that the other chairmen will be announced later. Each regional district chairman will appoint a chairman in charge of each county in his district, and the county chairman in turn will appoint a local chairman for municipalities.

SAFE INVESTMENT

In making his announcement, Mr. Robertson said:

"At last we have an investment which is perfectly safe. It may be recommended by the most careful person to anyone, whether they be mothers, grandmothers or invalids.

No matter how desperately one may need his funds, they may be safely invested in the Thrift Bonds payable upon sixty (60) days' notice by the United States government. These bonds will undoubtedly be accepted everywhere the same as cash.

They will be as good as gold. They should become instantly popular. Anyone having cash unemployed, and by this I mean not now invested or on deposit in banks, should go to his nearest bank and buy these bonds. His money so invested will not only be safe, but will also earn 2 per cent interest."

CAMPAIGN PURPOSE

The purpose of the campaign is to put idle funds to work either through deposit in banks or investment in sound securities. In order to make available a short-term government obligations in small denominations, the Treasury is offering an issue of United States Treasury certificates, payable in one year, with interest from March 15, 1932, at the rate of 2 per cent per annum.

The securities will be in coupon form in denominations of $50, $100 and $500, and will be redeemed at par and accrued interest at the option of the holder on 60 days advance notice, and surrender of the certificates with unmatured coupon attached.

It is expected that these certificates will be available at the banks on Tuesday, March 15, 1932.

7 TO 10 MILLION MORE NEEDED FOR RELIEF

Amount Required Here Is Fixed Officially; Sources To Be Surveyed Next

The increase in relief needs in Allegheny County will require from $7,000,000 to $10,000,000 more than is at present available or pledged to the Welfare Fund and Emergency Association to carry through to March 1, 1933, the report of a special committee headed by A. K. Oliver today disclosed.

The smaller estimate is based on the assumption that the Talbot Bill will be declared constitutional and $1,600,000 will be available from that to lighten the burden of the relief agencies. It also depends on funds which will be available for the use of the County Poor Board during the last half of the year through the increase in the poor tax.

TO STUDY SOURCES

The report was accepted by the operating committee of the Emergency Association of which Frank R. Phillips is chairman, and will be turned over to the executive committee for a decision on the methods of raising the money.

The operating committee in accepting the report discussed the possibility of again asking the public to contribute.

ESTIMATES COINCIDE

The estimates of needs were reached by a careful study of facts and figures by experts. Four methods were used with the following results: $10,660,000, $10,780,000, $12,955,000 and $10,710,000.

The Committee of Six, representing both Welfare and Emergency Association, filed the report. The relief organizations of the county were praised for the work they are doing in the face of conditions which are described in the report as "unparalleled" in their severity.

CITY DECLARED TYPO CENTER

Pittsburgh is the typographical center of America, according to H. D. C. Pepler, author of several books on typography and printing and a member of the Craftsmen's Colony of Ditchling, Sussex, England, who spoke at the Printers' Wednesday Luncheon Club in McCreery's at noon today. After a visit to Carnegie Tech, Connolly Trade School and Sacred Heart Church yesterday, he said:

"It is a great mistake for all the wealth to be centered in New York. There are many important cities like Pittsburgh which are more natural centers of work and industry than New York. This is where thought should eminate from. It is too bad there are no great publishing industries here, because you have great technical perfection in printing. New York drains money out of Pittsburgh with chain shops and stores. Depression in New York effects adversely the cities which produced its wealth."

East End Theater Robber Suspect Held

Retirement Rumors False, Sunday Says

FRANKLIN, Pa., March 2.—"Billy" Sunday completed two weeks services at Franklin Gospel Tabernacle, and headed for Harrisburg and Washington. He denied reports he plans soon to retire. He said:

"Do I look as though I had lost my punch? Not by a long shot. I'm completely recovered from that cold and never felt better than I do right now."

BEAVER, Pa., March 2.—James E. Griffith, official court stenographer of Beaver County, has been given the contract to report the trial of Mayor Charles H. Kline, Pittsburgh, in Butler, this month.

Print Device Spoils on Voting Machines

The voting machines' printing apparatus has dried out because of the heat in the cellar of the new County Building, and 500 print rolls and print cloths will be needed to put them in condition for the election, according to Director of Elections John W. Vickerman. The Commissioners authorized advertising for the equipment at their meeting yesterday.

City's Own 'International' Art Work on Exhibition at Tech

EXAMINING SOME OF THE COMMUNITY CENTER ART EXHIBITED AT CARNEGIE TECH

Community Center Designers Show Fine Results

By PENELOPE REDD

The College of Fine Arts at Carnegie Institute of Technology is showing through March 22 Pittsburgh's own "international of paintings." From the by-streets of the city, from the homes whose family customs savor of foreign lands, these children have come to the city's community centers for recreation.

Their recreation has actually been re-creation. So consistently does one apprehend the designer's pleasure in adventuring into the arts that individual is merged with the general feeling manifested by the entire group of 200 or more objects.

Penelope Redd

Therefore, no one individual will be identified in this review with any single object exhibited.

Kingsley Association is represented by textiles, pottery, glazed ceramic figures, and by water color drawings. The recital stock is primarily Italian in the district.

The Y. M. H. A. sends a collection of drawings and of paintings in oil.

This exhibition has a deeper significance than ingenuous viewpoint, ingenious composition, or competent performance. The fact is there are several hundred persons, ranging from nine years upwards, who invest their leisure in a practical appreciation of art. That in itself is the nucleus of a potential group of art supporters in the community.

Samuel Rosenberg's class at the Y. M. H. A. is an adult one. Consequently, the eye is not inveigled by the naive quality characteristic of the other centers.

Armando del Cimmuto, like Rosenberg, a graduate of the College of Fine Arts, has a group of youngsters at the Irene Kaufmann Settlement House. He has directed their instincts for uninhibited expression into orderly designs glorifying their immediate experiences. The color in these paintings would rouse envy in the heart of the modernist. Note the study of the folk in front of the fish shop. Their youth is, of course, evident in their inability to design in terms of three dimensions.

Raymond Baxter Dowden, yet another of the Carnegie clan, working at Manchester Educational Center, has quite a different racial combination with which to work. The Nordic races are dominant. Though less effective at first glance, closer study reveals in many of the pictures, a genuine power to organize pictorially. Some of the souvenirs of Father Cox's "March" are vital.

This is an exhibition that all adults should see. We predict that it will infect many with an impulse while away a negligible hour at the great sport of visual expression.

The hospitality of the College of Fine Arts is to be commended for giving the city a show so imaginatively provocative.

ACCUSED PAIR TO TESTIFY IN VOTE TRIAL

Duquesne Chief to Follow Policemen on Stand; Clear One by Ordered Verdict

Chief of Police Thomas J. Flynn, of Duquesne, and Nick Spanovich, a Duquesne voter, made a general denial today in their own defense to charges of violating the election laws.

Character witnesses were then called, with indications that the case would reach the jury late today.

Five other Duquesne policemen, also defendants in the case, testified yesterday, and a sixth, William Soltis, was taken out of the case on a directed verdict of not guilty by Visiting Judge J. A. Chambers of Lawrence County, when state witnesses failed to connect him with the charges.

The other defendants are Timothy Long, William Malloy, George Wallington, Henry Jones and M. Shaughnessy. All testified they had arrested or witnessed the arrests of voters during the September primary, but said the voters were involved in fights. They said those arrested had been taken from Duquesne to the Ranskin lockup to avoid possible trouble.

Assistant District Attorney B. Meredith Reid, who prosecuted the case, said hired thugs started the fights with active workers during the hot local political fight, whereupon, he declared, the police arrested the men who had been attacked and paid no attention to the thugs. When Attorney Louis Little, for the defense, accused Albert Dopicus, one of the state's witnesses, of having been drinking, Attorney Reid had two members of the jury smell Dopicus' breath, and explained that Dopicus always "talked that way."

when "COLDS CATCH YOUR CHILDREN"

. . . a cleansing dose of Castoria!

The first step to take when your child catches cold, doctors agree, is to cleanse the body of all accumulated waste and infection-breeding material.

To carry off this poisonous matter, nothing is better than Castoria. It acts gently and mildly enough for children's delicate requirements, and yet it does the work unfailingly.

Castoria, you know, is a pure vegetable preparation made specially for babies and children. It contains no harsh, harmful drugs, no narcotics of any kind. It is so mild you can safely give it to relieve a colicky baby. Yet, in larger doses, it is an effective regulator for older children. And another help for mothers—children like its taste!

When you find a cold, a little fever, or a digestive upset starting, call in Castoria's kindly help. Your doctor will commend you for wise, prompt action. Don't forget — the genuine Castoria always has the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package. Be sure you get genuine Castoria.

HOW WOULD YOU LIKE TO LOSE 6 POUNDS FAT WEEKLY

Yet Eat And Drink Your Fill?

An Amazing Yet Simple Method Recently Brought to This Country from England, That Enables the Average Fat Person to Rip 6 or More Pounds of Fat Off a Week Without Starvation or One Extra Step of Exercise

It seems that the British have found a way to rip off excess fat that's the dream of every too-fat person. That is, to rip it off without starving, without tiring exercise.

Under an extraordinarily simple and pleasant regimen discovered there, the average fat person loses as much as six to ten pounds weekly; yet suffers no pangs of hunger, no aching muscles, no weakness or depression. Returning travelers from Europe talked so much about it, that it has now been brought to this country. Anyone can follow it; so if you want to get thin, here's your chance.

Eat, Sleep, Drink and Grow Thin, Doing Only This

All the method involves is a glass of water before breakfast—to clear the intestines and tone the system—and a few minor changes in your diet.

Here is what you do: Tear this article out and save it, so you won't forget.

Before Breakfast: Drink an ordinary tumbler full of cool water to which you've added a teaspoon of effervescent salt. (Get the brand named "Andrews" at any drug store.) This to eliminate the usual curse of fat people: accumulated poisons and bloat. Also to cut the moisture weight of your body—sometimes as much as three pounds in one day.

At Meals: Cut out ONLY fat meats. Eat your usual quantity of lean meats and ADD a double-supply of green vegetables . . . spinach, cabbage, fresh peas, lettuce, etc. Then for dessert, shift from pastry and pies to FRESH FRUIT. The more you eat of these the better. They're super-nourishing vitamin foods.

Drink, too, if you like them, sauerkraut juice, tomato juice or orange juice "cocktails" before lunch and supper. Eat fresh fruit, too, before bed if you like to eat before retiring.

That's all you do. No wonder England and all of Europe is cheering this discovery. You lose weight day by day, week by week . . . usually from six or seven pounds weekly to even as much as ten pounds, and feel amazingly more alert and active while you are. Doctors of world knowledge widely endorse this way. The salt tones and clears the system. The vitamin foods take the place of those that build weight and fat, and thus fat goes like magic.

Embark on the Great Adventure of getting thin today. Ask your doctor about this if you wish to be doubly sure this is the simplest, safest way to lose embarrassing bulk. You can get Andrews Effervescent Salt at any drug store for a few cents.

FRIEDMAN POSTS BOND IN FRANKLIN BANK INDICTMENT

TWO OFFICERS READY TO GIVE $5,000 BAIL.

Herman Friedman has posted $10,000 bond to insure his appearance to answer six counts of fraudulent conversion in an information filed by George F. Taylor, Jr., Deputy State Secretary of Banking, following investigation of the records of the closed Franklin Savings and Trust Company.

Charles A. Bardolph, bank president, and R. T. Armstrong, vice president, assured a constable from Alderman T. A. Flanigan's office, that they will furnish bond today.

David Kellerman, fourth man included in the new bank charges, has not been located and is believed to be in Youngstown, O. His arrest today was predicted.

Additional informations charging conspiracy to defraud the Franklin Savings and Trust Company were filed by Taylor late yesterday and included joint counts against Bardolph and Friedman and against Bardolph and Kellerman.

A hearing for Friedman before Alderman Thomas A. Flanigan was set for March 14. Friedman is represented by Attorneys Charles B. Prichard and Joseph H. Reich. Reich said:

"The checks referred to in the informations were made out to Friedman and turned over to the Franklin Savings and Trust Company. There is no substance to the charges at all."

BASIS OF CHARGE

In addition to the joint counts, there are 32 accusations against Bardolph. These include 16 counts of making false entries, two counts of perjury, four counts of embezzlement and 10 counts of aiding in false entries.

ARTHUR BARGER EXHIBITING HIS LATVIAN STAMP GROUP FOR MISS MARION MULLEN

New Yorker Believes 'Aerial Mail Men Began in Asia

The practicability of carrying mail by airplane was first demonstrated in India and not in the United States, according to Arthur Barger, of New York, who is exhibiting part of his prized collection of stamps here this week.

As evidence, Barger has in his exhibition of unusual and curious stamps, a letter mailed from Allahabad to Naini Junction, India, February 18, 1911. The first air mail demonstration in the United States took place September 18, 1911, at Garden City Estates, N. Y.

Most of the collection being exhibited at the Joseph Horne Company consists of novelties and includes a sheet of Latvian postage stamps printed on the back of German war map paper.

Another exhibit which is attracting unusual interest is a Tin Can stamp issued in the Tonga Islands in the South Seas. Niuafoou, where they were issued, is surrounded by coral reefs and natives swim out with the mail bearing it in a tin can tied to a pole.

Mr. Barger thought that the organization of the Sun-Telegraph Stamp Collectors, encouraged by a special department in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph is considerably responsible for the unusual interest in philatalics according to his observations in Pittsburgh since he has been here.

COUNCIL SHUNS UNITED DRIVE ON UTILITIES

Rejects Invitation to Join In State-Wide Fight for Reduction in Charges

Despite concentrated efforts by cities, boroughs and townships throughout the entire state to strengthen the fight against excessive public utilities rates by joining the Pennsylvania Fair Rate Association, City Council today had declined an invitation to join. The rejection was unanimous and was made without comment.

Scores of municipalities in the Greater Pittsburgh and Western Pennsylvania districts have joined the movement or are contemplating doing so.

The invitation was contained in a communication from the Association, read at a meeting of Council's Committee on Finance yesterday. A protest against the city's acceptance of meager reduction offered on electric light rates and bus fares, was contained in the association's letter. Council has postponed action on its approval or disapproval of the new schedules, offered by President Frank R. Phillips, of the Philadelphia Company, pending a further study of the plan by City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt.

Schedules offered included an approximate 10-cent per month reduction on household electric bills and a 5 per cent saving on 25-cent bus fares, if blocks of tickets were purchased instead of individual fares.

DELAY ACTION ON CUT

STUDY TEST CASE

Aside from its action on the association's requests, Council today was studying the status of a bus fare test case against the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, instituted, according to Waldschmidt, by the Allied Boards of Trade.

Waldschmidt informed Council the Public Service Commission had taken no action towards a decision on the matter and that the case was dormant at the present time. The Solicitor also pointed out that affairs of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company were now under the jurisdiction of the Traffic Conference Board.

Rebels Quit Town Captured in Finland

HELSINGFORS, Finland, March 2.—(AP.)—The force of Fascist revolters who continued to hold the town of Mantsala, dwindled during the night from 20,000 to not more than 4,000, and government officials expressed the belief that the revolt would be ended without bloodshed.

A large force of troops was camped outside the city, which is 35 miles from the capital. The government officers refused to negotiate with the rebels and they adopted a policy of watchful waiting in the belief that the rest of the Fascists would leave the town shortly.

HEINIE ALWAYS HAS REPORTED IN END

THERE IS NOTHING new or novel in the continued difference of opinion between the Pirate officials and Pitcher Heinie Meine, who, since the acceptance of terms by Steve Swetonic, remains as the Pittsburgh club's only surviving holdout. For Meine has shown on more than one previous occasion that he has a mind and a will of his own, and disagreements between the flinger and his employers have not been infrequent. As a matter of fact, it was only because Heinie was having a dispute with the Kansas City club owners that the Bucs were able to obtain him for the 1929 season in exchange for Pitcher Lester Bartholomew and a cash consideration.

Heinie Meine

Right off the bat, Meine became a Pirate holdout. He missed the entire training trip, did not report until April 26, and did not pitch until May 31. After pitching until August 15 in 1930, the veteran righthander decided that the state of his health demanded a rest, and no amount of persuasion could make him stay with the club. He had made up his mind to go home, and home he went. However, previous disagreements ended in Meine's returning to the club, and it is safe to predict the outcome this time will not be different.

THE FIRST NEGRO baseball league to operate on a daily schedule is assured for the coming season, with Pittsburgh as one of the members, represented by the Homestead Grays. The organization of an eight-club circuit was perfected at a meeting held in Philadelphia, from which Cum Posey, head of the Grays, has just returned.

The new body will be known as the East-West Colored League, with the following clubs and managers: Pittsburgh, Homestead Grays, Jud Wilson; Detroit, William Bismukes; Cleveland, Bullet Rogan, formerly Kansas City manager; Washington, Frank Warfield, formerly of Balt[illegible] Black Sox; Baltimore, Black Sox, Dick Lundy; Philadelphia, Bi[illegible]es, Judy Johnson; Newark, Browns, John Beckwith, formerly of Homestead Grays, and Cubans, S. Ramires.

IT IS PLANNED to open the league season Saturday, May 7, and finish on September 11, the first Sunday after Labor Day. The schedule will be adopted at a meeting called for that purpose in Washington one week from next Sunday.

A split season will be played, with the winning clubs of the first and second halves meeting in a post-season playoff series for the league championship, in the event the same club does not win in both periods. Each club has posted a forfeit guarantee it will go through the season. All games will be umpired by a regular staff of arbiters employed by the league.

EXCEPT FOR SCATTERED open dates, about 10 for each club, games will be scheduled for every day during the regular season. The home games of the Homestead Grays will be played at Forbes Field, and all will be twilight attractions except Saturday events, which will be put on in the afternoons. No league club will be permitted to play any outside team within 20 miles of the grounds of another member of the circuit. It will be permissible, at the will of the home club, to transfer any regular league game to another town in its territory and play it there as a special attraction for that community. It is the intention of the Grays management to play a few exhibitions outside the league with the best independent clubs of the district. All of these will be played away from home.

THE MAIN STUNT at which a second baseman must be adept is pivoting on double plays. The keystone sacker who has the ability to shine at that specialty will save a lot of ball games for his club. The one who is weak at it will lose a corresponding number of contests.

Freddie Lindstrom

The second-base play of Rogers Hornsby never was a work of art in some respects. At going after short flies to right field he was the poorest in the majors. But swinging double plays was one thing he always could do. In fact, Rogers has been so good at that trick that Freddie Lindstrom has picked him out as his model in schooling himself for duty at the midway in the Giants' lineup this year.

"HORNSBY IS THE king of them all in pivoting," Lindstrom said. "That throw of his across his body is a classic. He's always moving with the play, and you simply can't knock him down. Believe me, I've tried it, time after time.

"Frisch is another master at the double play. He has a different style. He steps back after making his move. Or maybe he straddles the bag. He's all alone in that specialty. However, I've knocked him down."

A DISCUSSION HERE among some ex-professional basketball players, who are now coaches, turned to systems, and the verdict of the majority was that where there is a set of players who can think for themselves, and who know how to feint and fake and make their own plays, no other system is needed. It was argued that too much stress has been placed upon certain types of offense and defense. These were held to mean little or nothing, and the Rosenblum Celtic team, which meets the Renaissance Negro five at Motor Square Garden March 15 was pointed out as a supporting example. For the Celtics have no system whatever, not even one built around the pivot play, of which Dutch Dehnert is a leading exponent.

THE SUCCESS OF the Celtics is said really to be due to the fact that they have in Hickey and Banks two of the greatest players on the courts at feinting and faking. Banks is rated as the last word in that kind of maneuvering, and with Dehnert co-operating as a pivot-play expert, the Rosies simply make their own plays as the game goes on.

It is contended that once the players are on the court they must do their own thinking, as no coach can do it for them then. Failure to recognize this is said to have caused many a team to be unsuccessful when it should have been a steady winner.

ANY SET OFFENSE can be good for only a short while, for if it is at all successful at first it is only a matter of time until opposing teams discover what it is all about.

Then the foe proceeds to build a defense to break it down, and if the system players have not been taught to think for themselves to meet changing situations, they are practically lost, left without a weapon.

Ernie Schaaf

ERNIE SCHAAF, looking so good as to scare away the average heavyweight, faces the possibility of losing many a profitable date. Chicago promoters experienced plenty of trouble in that direction this week trying to find a satisfactory opponent for the former sailor. Schaaf, declining to fight on March 23 because that date falls in Holy Week, consented to sign with the Chicago Stadium management for a bout on March 18 or 30, but in seeking an opponent for him the matchmaker ran into one snag after another. Tuffy Griffiths said he was to be married on March 28 and would leave immediately on his honeymoon. King Levinsky wouldn't have any part of the Boston battler, and Jack Kearns said Mickey Walker would have to be paid $50,000 for such a match, which was just another way of saying he did not want the bout.

losing games hither and yon, right, left and intermediate. Grove City started it all. Pitt took 'em twice, Duquesne once and then West Virginia smacked them down at Morgantown.

After the defeat at the hands of the Mountaineers, the Tartans took new heart, went East and won three games in a row. Last night, they made it four, beating West Virginia in the Tech gymnasium, 45 to 31, exhibiting a hard driving offense and strong defense to even matters for the season with the Mountaineers.

Bobby Smith and Lou Jagnow, Tech's crack pair of forwards, led the scoring last night. Smith bagged five field goals and Jagnow six, two more than were recorded by the entire West Virginia team. At the half, Tech led by 22-11, and had little or no trouble maintaining the advantage in the second period.

West Virginia had a lot of heart and fight but exhibited less class against the Skibos than they did against Duquesne last week.

By JULIUS LEVIN

All hopes for a possible W. P. I. A. L. basketball finale between brother coaches depend on the outcome of the Ford City-North Union second round elimination battle in the Pitt Stadium pavilion tonight.

Homestead High School, coached by Bill Campbell, having qualified for the quarter finals by disposing of Burgettstown Union, Neenie Campbell, brother of the Homestead mentor, will strive to do likewise by eliminating Ray Welsh's North Union quintet tonight.

IMPRESSIVE RECORDS

Ford City is champion of Section VI, while North Union is the standard bearer of Section XIII. Ford City's record for the season shows 16 victories out of 19 games played, among the triumphs being 10 successive conquests in league encounters. Ford City was undefeated in the Section VI race.

North Union likewise shows an unusually impressive record with 13 victories in 14 league encounters. The only defeat of the season came in the final battle with Georges Township, when the regulars were rested.

Among the outstanding triumphs scored by Ford City is a non-league victory over New Kensington, champion of Section I, and which is a contestant in the eliminations.

PLANS GO ASTRAY

An unusual story is being told about the coaches involved in tonight's elimination battle. With the championships clinched prior to the playing of their final league games, both coaches decided to rest their regulars in the closing engagements.

Coach Campbell decided to take his Ford City players to North Union to scout their opponents, and Ray Welsh took his North Union quintet to Ford City with an idea of getting a line on Campbell's team. Imagine their embarrassment when the rival coaches discovered they had crossed themselves up.

When scholastic supporters see Ford City trot out to the floor at the Stadium tonight they will find a team that employs the same style of play as Homestead, pre-tourney favorite and a quintet that has made the best showing in the eliminations to date. Both Ford City and Homestead use the professional style of play. The records of the two teams follow:

UPSETS MARK SCHOOL SERIES

The championship hopes of the Beaver Valley in the twentieth annual basketball elimination series were shattered last night when its two representatives in the title play fell by the wayside in the biggest upsets of the tournament to date.

Leetsdale High School, champion of Section II, saw its hopes for the championship dashed to smithereens in a battle with Zelienople High School, champion of Section XVIII, in the Beaver Falls High School gymnasium. The score was 17 to 14.

MT. LEBANON RALLIES

Aliquippa, champion of Section IV, fell by the wayside at the hands of Mt. Lebanon High School, champion of Section IX, in a torrid contest at the Pitt Stadium pavilion, 23 to 17.

As a result of its victory Zelienople earned the right to meet New Castle, Section III champion, at Beaver Falls High Friday in a second round contest. Mt. Lebanon's victory enabled the Leucht charges to advance to the quarter finals and they will meet the winner of tonight's battle between Ford City and North Union on March 10.

Last night's game at the Stadium pavilion was by far the best of the series to date. An outclassed team for almost three quarters of the contest, the Mt. Lebanon passers came to life in the latter stages of the battle to snatch victory from almost certain defeat.

SCHENLEY IN FINAL

Schenley High qualified to meet Allegheny High, champion of Section II, in a post-season series for the City League championship yesterday afternoon when it defeated Fifth Avenue for the Section I title, 22-19. The teams finished the regular season deadlocked for first place in Section I.

The City League series will start Friday afternoon at the Pitt Stadium pavilion. The lineups of

BOSTON HURLER CUT IN FIGHT

BREWTON, Ala., March 2.—(AP.)—A farewell fish fry given in honor of big Ed Morris, broke up with a fistfight, and today the veteran pitcher of the Boston Red Sox is in a hospital at Century, Fla., with serious knife wounds.

He was stabbed twice in the chest, the knife blade barely missing his heart. Doctors say he has a slight chance to recover.

Friends who organized the fish fry on the eve of his contemplated departure for the Red Sox training camp at Savannah, Ga., said the stabbing climaxed an argument between Morris and Joe White, a member of the party.

Morris, a strapping fellow towering six feet two, knocked White down and in so doing tripped and fell. While they were lying on the ground, witnesses said, White whipped out his knife and plunged it into Morris' chest.

White was held, pending a change in Morris' condition.

BAT FORFEITS TITLE

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—Batting championship has been relinquished in New York state league because of his world tobacco title to the Boxing Commission at a meeting yesterday, Ray Manager, H. Manley, remains under ban.

ALLEGHENY VICTOR

BUC PITCHERS LOOK GOOD

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 2.—The Pirate pitching staff, which last season was a thing of horrors to Buccaneer fans, will be a pleasant surprise to them this season, if the moundsmen continue the good work they have done so far. Last season the Bucco hurlers, with a few exceptions were noted for their inability to "last the route, which was the direct result of improper methods of training in the spring.

This will not be the case under Manager Gibson, who, at the present time, has his hurlers, especially those who arrived with the first group two weeks ago, in splendid condition, and ready at this time to go almost the full route.

VETS IN SHAPE

This is particularly true of Remy Kremer, Larry French, Glenn Spencer, and Charley Woods, the veteran members of the staff. Kremer and Woods are in excellent condition, with Spencer and French just a step behind.

The recruit chuckers, including Jimmy Bivins, Jimmy Crandall, Bill Harris, Charles Taylor and John Niggeling, also are in prime form and have been showing a world of stuff in the daily sessions.

Ervin Brame and Bill Swift, the other two moundsmen, arrived Saturday with the second squad, and, as yet, have not been pressed into active service. However, Otis Crandall and Bill Hinchman are seeing to it that the pair get plenty of work chasing fungoes.

GAME TOMORROW

The Waner boys appeared to be in condition in their first two sessions yesterday. Paul reported in excellent shape, while Lloyd will need only a few days to round into shape.

Pie Traynor, Steve Swetonic and Howdy Grosskloss are expected to arrive in camp today, and will round out the squad. It is expected that Manager Gibson will stage the first inter-club game tomorrow afternoon.

Night of Woe Marks Coast Ring Show

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 2.—(INS.)—While watching the Arizmendi-Varner fight here last night, Raymond Hatton, the actor, fainted from excitement, and today was resting at his home. Baby Arizmendi, Mexican flash, won the decision over Claude Varner, California featherweight champion, in a close and furious 10-rounder.

Harold Arnberg, 42, assistant treasurer of Olympic Auditorium, dropped dead from a heart attack while counting the night's receipts.

SQUASH PLAY TILTS TORRID

With the semi-finals scheduled tomorrow, interesting, torrid contests were run off yesterday in the Class B city squash racquets championship tourney, being held at the Keystone Athletic Club. Quarter-final matches resulted as follows:

P. A. McMahon, P. A. A., defeated Paul Hicks, University Club, 10-15, 12-15, 15-10, 15-12, 15-12; Alex Robinson, Allegheny C. C., defeated J. O. Craig, K. A. C., 12-15, 15-11, 15-8; George W. Kepler, P. A. A., defeated N. N. Parker, K. A. C., 15-8, 15-10, 16-17, G. C. Kennedy, K. A. C., defeated Graham McCarro, Pittsburgh G. C., 10-11, 17-15, 15-8.

Borotra Quits Davis Cup Tennis

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—Jean Borotra, France's tennis playing business man, announced today on his arrival to defend his National indoor tennis title and play in an international series of matches against a United States team, that he was through with Davis Cup tennis.

PIRATES SIGN SWETONIC

Steve Swetonic, of the North Side, who has been one of the most persistent of the Pirate holdouts, has signed his 1932 contract, it was learned today.

Steve Swetonic

Steve spent most of the winter in Los Angeles. He was out of action through most of last season with a sore arm. In the general downward revision of salaries it is hinted that the pay of the native son was cut heavily, but Steve refused to sign. Long negotiations were necessary before the athlete and his employers could agree.

The signing of Swetonic leaves Heinie Meine as the lone Pittsburgh holdout. The list of dissenters was a lengthy one a few days after the 1932 documents were sent out, but President William E. Benswanger and Vice President S. E. Watters have been able to iron out practically all of the trouble.

Mercer County High Tourney on Tonight

Two more scholastic tournaments will get under way in the district this week. Tonight the annual Mercer County championship is ushered in at Grove City College with a strong field in the running. Farrell is the favorite.

The Washington County tournament will be inaugurated on Saturday and will continue until March 9. Three classes will compete for the titles, Canonsburg and McDonald, two of the 1931 winners, will defend their crowns.

PITT FROSH COP

GENEVA, GROVE CITY WIN

GROVE CITY, Pa., March 2.—Grove City closed its home court season last night by defeating Allegheny, 31-25, in a snappy game, but reached its best type of play in the closing moments when the visitors reached top speed.

The Crimson set the pace after the first five minutes and at the half led, 15-12.

DETROIT, March 2.—Detroit maintained their two-point margin over Pittsburgh in the play-off race by getting a 1-1 overtime tie with the Yellow Jackets before a slim crowd here last night.

Detroit's lone goal was one that might have been questioned, as Gillie crossed in front of Goalie Baxter, of the Jackets, as Rockburn golfed a shot from the wing. Baxter did not see the flying rubber. The goal came in the first period and was wiped out by Rodden early in the second session when his shot from the right wing fooled Goalie Venne.

It was a rough contest, in which McCabe, of the Olympics, suffered a deep cut over one eye and one below the other. The lineup:

The OLYMPIC GAMES

By Lawson Robertson

Lawson Robertson—Head Coach American Olympic Teams

CHAPTER III.

The Olympic Games were continued by Greece after it was conquered by Rome. The first few Olympiads continued to be affairs exclusively for Greeks. But the Romans, as spectators, took a great interest in the sport and the Roman youths then were urged to train for participation in the Olympic contests of the future.

Thus the contests ceased to be something that merely determined who were the greatest athletes in Greece and became clashes for supremacy between the best trained Romans and Greeks, with the Greeks unusually successful for almost a century.

DISCORD ENDS GAMES

Eventually, however, the Romans developed some truly great athletes and the domination of the Greeks at the games came to an end. The Olympics were conducted amicably for many generations—and then came discord.

The Greeks charged that the Roman champions were professionalizing themselves. It was claimed that the winners of Olympic events capitalized their popularity and fame by going on tours and accepting cash or some material equivalent for making public appearances.

The Romans denied the accusations—and continued to participate in Olympic Games. But generally there was protest from the Greeks over the amateur status of some of the Roman entries. This led to increasing bitterness through the years.

During one of the Games, the Romans, angered to white heat by the Greek charges of professionalism, went on a rampage. They set fire to some of the buildings which were used to house athletes and wrecked about everything that was wreckable in and around the stadium.

This was the climax.

Emperor Theodosius, of Rome, took the attitude in A. D. 394 that the Olympic Games had become a public nuisance and he issued an order abolishing them.

No Olympics were staged from then until their modern revival in 1896.

When Rome was captured by the barbarians in 476 A. D., they seized the statue of Zeus, which was 60 feet tall and made of ivory and gold, and took it to Constantinople.

The statue was destroyed by fire soon afterward.

An earthquake wrecked the stadium somewhere along in the Sixth century and later a landslide buried the ruins under dirt and stones to a depth of nearly 20 feet.

GREEKS LOSE SUPERIORITY

Almost 60 years ago, German archaeologists proceeded to remove the soil overlying Olympia; the task was completed in 1881, and Olympia was restored to some of its ancient glory.

In 1892, Baron Pierre de Coubertin, of France, an athletic enthusiast, proposed a revival of the ancient games in Athens. Jeers met his ears. But he persisted with his suggestion and in 1894 lined up sufficient support to insure the staging of the games.

Due to a generous donation by M. Averoff, of Alexandria, it was possible to build a stadium that duplicated that which was used for centuries by the Greeks of the mist-swathed eras, and the first of the modern Olympics took place in April, 1896.

The strange thing about it was that, although the Greeks originated the games and were, with the Romans, champions for more than 1,000 years at all the events that make up an Olympic program, they had little representation in the 1896 games and were overwhelmed at nearly everything they tried except the marathon race, in which Loues, a native son, was the victor.

Duquesne University vs. Bucknell, Lewisburg, Pa.

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

While the fans still are talking about that splendid exhibition of fighting given by Jackie Fields, the world welterweight champion, in beating Jimmy Belmont in eight rounds at Motor Square Garden Monday night, a lot of other interesting boxing dope has sprung up.

The main item is that the Moose Temple is to return to the local professional fistic circuit. Jules Beck, matchmaker of Motor Square Garden, is going to be given a promoter's license to operate the Moose as well, now that Apples Meyers has given up the ghost there. This deal to have the Garden management control both the East End and downtown arenas was up several months ago and was officially approved, but it couldn't stand up in the face of a criticism of a monopoly and so did a fadeout.

SHOW NEXT WEEK

Meanwhile Eddie (Phi Beta) Kapphan will continue to run his club in Addison street every Friday night, and the reopening of the downtown arena makes matters just that much more difficult for him to gain a foothold.

Beck plans to operate every Wednesday night at the Moose, and, with Motor Square Garden closed to boxing for three weeks in April, due to the food and General Motors shows, he expects to do fairly well with his sideline. It is doubtful if he will be back with the Meyers Bowl, in North Braddock, this summer, and he already is laying lines in other directions. His first show at the Moose will be held next Wednesday.

PLADNER IN TOP BOUT

The Garden has reshaped its program for next Monday to put the Emile (Spider) Pladner-Jimmy Thomas bout on top instead of subordinating it to the Battling Gizzy-Eddie Lord 10-rounder. Lord means little or nothing here, while Pladner, as the French bantamweight champion, brings with him an international reputation. Guy Salerno and K. O. Kelley box an eight-round feature and there will be a six-round preliminary.

Matchmaker Bill Dummer has completed a double windup bill for the Kapphan Arena Friday night. He has Billy Holt, Negro welterweight of Homewood, matched with Ray Lyle, of Akron, in the main event, and Joey Thomas, local featherweight, against Dandy Allen, Philadelphia Negro, in the other 10-rounder. Sammy Paris, of the Hill, boxes Johnny Cataline, of Charleston, W. Va., in the second bout, and Fritzie Zivic, of Lawrenceville, meets Andy Kozak, of Turtle Creek, in the opener.

Jimmy Belmont was sent away to the country yesterday to recover from his defeat by Fields. His manager, Frank Klaus, took this action to get him away from his friends until the aftermath blows over when Jimmy will resume training and try to make a fresh start. The show drew more than $6,100, of which Fields received 35 per cent and Belmont 20.

Between Rounds

No former tournament winners will be barred from the Golden Gloves amateur boxing tourney, at the Howard A. A., Beaver Falls, March 10-11.

Curly Klass and Steve Libenscheck, heavyweights, will box the main bout of the amateur show in Masonic Hall, North Side, next Monday evening under the auspices of the Young Men's Republican Club. Stanley Phillips and James Joyce are the matchmakers.

Marty Gornick, who defeated Joey Lawrence in a 10-rounder in Dayton, O., Monday night, will box there again on March 25, and also has a bout in the making at Buffalo next Monday. His hands, which caused him to lay off for a spell, stood up in good shape against Lawrence.

Charley Jones has turned down an invitation to enter Charley Baxter in the N. B. A. lightweight tournament at Grand Rapids. They're not fooling Charley. He investigated and found out several southpaws are among the entrants and that's why he isn't gambling with Baxter in there.

With the entries closing tonight, enough names already have been received to insure the success of the 1st-state amateur championships, to be held in the Moose Temple Friday and Saturday nights under the auspices of the 111th Infantry Veterans' Association for the benefit of their welfare fund. The leading clubs throughout Western Pennsylvania are represented.

Gorilla Jones, N. B. A. middleweight champion, bokes Chuck Burns in Columbus, Friday night; Frankie O'Brien at Spring Field, Mass., March 15, and Mr. Sullivan at Minneapolis, March 28. Jack Dempsey exhibits in Columbus next Monday night.

Tiger West, local middleweight, is gunning for a match with Guy Salerno, and it may be made soon. Meanwhile he has an offer for a bout in Milwaukee. Harry Coffey is managing him.

Mrs. Riley qualified yesterday with a card of 44-47—91. Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, won medal honors with a tally of 38-37—75.

CHILLYSAUCE

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

(Dan O'Leary, world-famous walker, according to a late news dispatch has been forced to cancel engagements on account of the appearance of a tumor on his right hip. Aged 92, O'Leary is thus incapacitated for the first time in 75 years. Dan was born in County Cork, Ireland. He has walked something like 300,000 miles and numbers many noted people among his friends.)

Oh, Daniel O'Leary,
Each mountain, prairie
From 'Frisco to Kerry
To you was so small!

Steam engines could hurry
And drivers might scurry—
But divvil the worry
They'd give you at all.

An age that's distressin'
Had need of your lesson—
Thank God for the blessin'
Your journeyings showed—

And, Dan, may that tumor
Be—through some strange rumor—
A growth of good humor
To light up your road.

O'Leary is within a short span of being the same age as John D. Rockefeller. The late Teddy Roosevelt was a warm friend and admirer of the rugged veteran.

It was on one of Dan's treks from New York to Philadelphia, approximately 100 miles, that Roosevelt's feeling toward the walker were evidenced in a sentimental way. Then President, the man who wielded the big stick was traveling between New York and Washington.

Roosevelt, so the story goes, was busy with important matters of state when he glanced out the window. As he did he caught sight of Dan hiking along at his merry clip. Jumping from his business and rushing toward an open window, Roosevelt exclaimed:

"Excuse me, gentlemen, I want to salute my good friend Dan O'Leary who is passing by."

Dan's last exhibition in Pittsburgh was at Forbes Field. Among other things his walking has had the effect of sending several grandchildren through college.

BOBBY JONES MAY PLAY HERE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

It has been learned on reliable authority that a strenuous effort is to be made to have Bobby Jones play in an exhibition match at a district club this summer. The one and only Atlanta Bob, although he now is of professional status, has lost little of his glamour, and if he is engaged to show for local fans a record gallery is assured.

Lynn C. Dundon, of the Culbertson Hills Golf Club, Edinboro, Pa., writes in to deny a statement credited to Johnny Capebianco, erstwhile pro at that club, who recently was signed by Aliquippa, to the effect that the "Edinboro club passed out of the picture due to stock market losses by its members."

Dundon writes:

"Culbertson Hills will open as soon as the weather permits, and expects, from all preliminary interest from this area's patronage, to have a most satisfying play this summer. In fact, considerable work is being done. Fairways have been prepared and the course will be in fine shape by the opening of the season. A number of experienced golfers in this area proclaim Culbertson Hills to be the outstanding course in this section."

Forbes

Notable Gain in Values Of Stocks, Bonds

By B. C. FORBES

THE MARKET value of New York Stock Exchange stocks increased upwards of a billion dollars during February. Bonds fared even better.

Confidence grows that quotations will not again sink to new depths.

ONE READER, after quoting from a newspaper: "Without short selling, Mr. Whitney (N. Y. Stock Exchange president) added, prices would go to extreme heights until checked, only to fall into crevasses so deep as to be ruinous to investors," comments:

Mr. Forbes

"With short selling permitted, prices went to extreme heights in 1929; similarly with short selling permitted they have gone to extreme depths. Just how far should they go to reach a crevasse in accordance with Mr. Whitney's definition and be ruinous to investors?"

What is bothering a few financial nabobs is Washington's threat to ummons the biggest short-sellers, thus unmasking their identity. The plea is being made that Washington should scrupulously avoid doing anything not calculated to inspire tranquility.

We shall see what we shall see.

Should the United States impose a tariff on importations of oil? When I put this question to W. A. Jones, of Henry L. Doherty & Company, he replied, with characteristic frankness:

"We are willing to do anything under the sun to help to stabilize the oil business. A tariff might help a little but at best it would treat symptoms and would not get at the root of our present troubles.

"Total imports of petroleum products during the last calendar year were only 86,000,000 barrels. And we exported 124,000,000 barrels. If a high tariff is built, we shall have to meet in our present foreign markets the petroleum products now imported into this country, much of which we process within our borders and on which processing we make some profit.

"While the actual petroleum production reported in the United States during the last calendar year was approximately 850,000,000 barrels, this figure represents perhaps less than one-half of the actual potential production available; or, stated in another way, we could now produce in this country alone more than twice as much oil as we are currently using.

"Until this condition is in better balance, we cannot hope for permanent relief; and, while the exclusion of foreign oil would help some, it would be a drop in the bucket."

FEBRUARY WAS a bad month dividendwise. It brought only 31 favorable announcement, contrasted with 204 unfavorable. The latter included 91 reductions and 61 omissions, while 52 payments were deferred.

This table gives both favorable and unfavorable announcements since the end of 1927:

INDUSTRY HELD NOW IN GOOD POSITION

Increased Buying Power Seen Needful to Restore Economic Equilibrium

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, March 2.—Returning to New York after a 7,000-mile journey across the continent, I am more than ever impressed with the fact that prosperity is made in the field, in the quarries and mines, on the farms, in the great centers of distribution, rather than in the stock market.

Before the recent tentative rally stocks to an exaggerated degree had been selling ex-hope. Security prices were reflecting despair. Even shares of companies like the well managed power and light companies which substantially retained their earning power reflected the low state of public enthusiasm.

Mr. Rukeyser.

From coast to coast, the paramount subject of public attention and interest is how to lift ourselves out of the economic gutter. I am impressed with the vast undiscounted opportunity for improvement in industry and commerce. For months, a recovery which shortages had made imminent, had been delayed by a credit panic, which has happily been checkmated by the recent remedial measures, including the Glass-Steagall bill.

IN GOOD POSITION

The great industries of the country are being managed more economically than ever before and are in splendid position to show a profit as soon as business proceeds on an economic scale. It is on an uneconomic basis at present, because the low volume, with more or less fixed overhead, prevents the vast economies of mass production and distribution.

Our fundamental malady is lack of economic equilibrium. The menace of so-called overproduction will hang over us until consumption is promoted by the reabsorption by industry, agriculture and commerce of the 8,000,000 unemployed. As long as so many consumers continue to trudge the streets without purchasing power, then the ailment of overequipped industry will linger. The re-employment of the idle will constitute the real basis for a new prosperity. Any reconstruction program which overlooks the unemployed must be temporary in its stimulating effects.

TO REMEDY EXCESSES

Excess plant capacity will be corrected indirectly by a return of the unemployed to consumption, thus enlarging effective demand, and also by a new period of mergers and consolidation.

This time the motive will not be mere stock market profit, as was the case during the late lamented new era, but rather correction of the unbalance between potential supply and effective demand. Specifically, strong corporations will absorb weaker competitors, and lop off excess capacity by closing up the least efficient and least modern units.

It will pay the strong to thus remove the depressing influence on prices of such uneconomic competition.

CHICAGO GRAIN PRICES RISE

CHICAGO, March 2.—Grain prices advanced early today, influenced by Liverpool reports of prospective better European continental demand for wheat. Expected donations of 40,000,000 bushels of Farm Board wheat for relief purposes was also construed as bullish. Opening unchanged to ⅜ cents up, wheat afterward advanced all around. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ cent higher and continued firm.

Predictions were current that domestic wheat acreage this season would not be as large as last year. However, it was conceded that much would depend on prices of wheat at the time of seeding and also that the amount of seeding would be affected by future soil and weather conditions. Bulls in wheat laid some stress on reports that, although British supplies of wheat this week had increased owing to heavy arrivals from Argentina, European continental wheat stocks had decreased 1,394,000 bushels. Unfavorable weather for corn movement gave firmness to feed grains.

Indiana Standard Reduces Salaries

CHICAGO, March 2.—(AP.)—A 10 per cent reduction in salaries of all employes, effective April 1, was announced by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

Forward March Continued by Radio Trade

NEW YORK, March 2.—The forward march of the radio trade takes little heed of unfavorable economic developments or of those adverse influences which have congested distributive channels during the last two years, says R. G. Dun & Co. in a special survey of the industry. Sales during 1931 maintained an average of around 250,000 receiving sets a month, it is estimated. The main difficulties of the industry centered in the distress prices of 1931, growing out of the overproduction in 1929.

Farm Implement Makers Disclose Big Volume Of Receivables

Farm implement manufacturers' reports for 1931 were noteworthy for the large volume of receivables disclosed, such assets comprising an unusually heavy proportion of total current assets. It remained, however, for Minneapolis-Moline Power Implement to throw some real light on that particular phase of the business. This company disclosed that the total of such assets was $11,551,723, including $1,020,092 on account of accrued interest. The interest figure is equivalent to 9 per cent of the total, suggesting that such receivables are in a measure of long standing. Receivables comprised about 70 per cent of the company's total current assets of $17,081,390 at the end of last year, while current liabilities of $1,783,796 were represented chiefly by bank loans totaling $1,350,000.

Heavy selling influenced by dividend changes made Bendix-Aviation and Johns-Manville two of the most active issues yesterday with both yielding rather substantially. Bendix dropped to a new low for the year on the reduction in the dividend rate to 15 cents a share compared with the 25 cent payment made three months ago. John-Manville yielded abruptly on the decision of the company to discontinue payments which had been on a $1 annual basis.

Much discussion in financial circles has to do with the imminence of a piece of good news from abroad. Conjecture along that line is without much influence marketwise, stocks continuing to move narrowly in extremely dull dealings, but it gives the speculative fraternity much food for thought to occupy its otherwise idle moments. Speculation is rife on what the character of such expected good news might prove to be. Recent firmness in sterling exchange naturally serve to turn attention toward the status of things at London, and led to the belief that a logical development would be a move on the part of the Bank of England to liquidate a part of its $200,000,000 credit received from American private banks. The British bank, it will be recalled, received this credit coincident with the advance of a $125,000,000 loan by the Federal Reserve Bank last summer, the latter loan having been liquidated the end of January.

"Our expenses are now running at an annual rate of about $1,000,000 below last year, Vice President Buettner, of the Bendix Aviation Corporation, stated. We have also cut salaries, etc., on a sliding scale ranging from 10 per cent in the lower brackets to 25 per cent in the higher. The Bendix Corporation recently received several additional new accounts from new companies for its automatic clutch control, vacuum power brake and carburetors. At present we have more lines of business with Ford Motor Company than at any time in our history. The company's aviation business has been holding up to normal."

Southern Railway Company in its application for a loan of $10,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, estimates it will show a deficit of $5,953,712 in the current year compared with a deficit of $5,922,842 in 1931. The estimate takes into consideration the 10 per cent wage reduction and increases in freight revenues from higher rates.

Several interests have been favoring scale buying in Continental Can and advised clients to pick up the stock. They point out that the current dividend of $2.50 a share seems certain to be continued, and with the company in a position to benefit immediately from an improvement in its business, a return of around 7 per cent at current prices must be considered attractive.

STOCK MARKET MAKES SLOW ADVANCE

Westinghouse and U. S. Steel Among Shares to Gain; Motors, Oils Sluggish

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—The stock market appeared to be viewing the outlook a little more cheerfully today, although its hopes, as expressed in most brokerage quarters, were modest.

The mid-week business statistics, while devoid of anything of a particularly conclusive nature, were slightly more encouraging and conditions abroad, with the British treasury preparing to pay off $150,000,000 of its American private banking credit, seemed to be distinctly better.

There was a slow advance in share prices, with several groups participating, but tobaccos, chemicals, utilities and miscellaneous industrials making the best progress. Shares up 1 to 2 points by early afternoon included American Tobacco B, American Telephone, Liggett and Myers B, Consolidated Gas, Union Pacific, Santa Fe, United States Steel, Eastman, Case, Westinghouse, Paramount, Loews, Radio, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Du Pont, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, American Can, Woolworth and Electric Autolite. Motors and oils were sluggish.

Brokers generally felt that the market might continue in a narrow trading range for some little time, although one of the larger wire houses definitely expressed the opinion that the market was in a period of accumulation.

A further reduction of the Bank of England's discount rate was widely forecast in international banking circles, and a reduction in the Reichsbank rate, with renewal of the $100,000,000 central banking credit, was regarded as likely.

Bankers expected the British $150,000,000 payment would have a further easing effect upon the New York money market, although rates were steady today.

While Iron Age estimated the week's steel production as unchanged at 26 per cent of capacity, some other estimates indicated a small gain, particularly in the Youngstown area. While steel prices remain to be tested, some executives are quoted as expressing the opinion that increases will be more likely than declines.

The week's electric power consumption report, showing a reduction of 7.4 per cent from last year, was a little better, and an increase of about 10,000 cars in freight car loadings was better than expected. The petroleum statistics, however, showing gains in both crude output and gasoline in storage, presumably accounted for sluggishness of oil shares.

CAR LOADINGS RISE 10,141

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Loading of revenue freight for the week, ended on February 20, totaled 572,606 cars, the American Railway Association announces. This is an increase of 10,141 cars over the week preceding, 140,550 cars below the corresponding week in 1931, and 254,954 cars under the same period two years ago.

A. P. I. Oil Figures Higher for Week

NEW YORK, March 2.—(AP.)—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 30,000 barrels in the week ended February 27, totalling 2,138,650 barrels, the American Petroleum Institute's weekly summary indicates. The daily average production east of California increased 38,100 barrels to 1,638,850. Gasoline stocks at these refineries were 45,567,000 barrels against 43,792,000.

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column; United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars:

EMBERS OF LOVE -:- Story of a Pretty Girl in Whom Burned The Flame of a Great Emotion -:- By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXIV.

The conductor's red hand closed over the yellow envelope again. "But it's Mr. Sargent—the gentleman in lower four! Ah . . . here he is now. A telegram for you, sir."

A tall, anaemic-looking man in a light suit pressed forward, shot a suspicious glance at Lily Lou. She turned away lifelessly. It didn't matter, of course. She hadn't really expected Ken would wire.

But in the bus, driving to the other station, she realized suddenly how very much alone she was. She hadn't really expected Ken to wire, but hope had flared for a moment, and now it was gone. She sat apathetically in her corner, waiting doggedly for the ride to be over.

It was a breathlessly hot day. On the New York train electric fans whirred, waiters hurried back and forth with frosty, clinking pitchers of iced punch, trays of ginger ale and bowls of ice. Everyone complained.

Everyone but Lily Lou. She hardly noticed the weather. It was just a train ride to her, something to be endured. Toward the last she was so ill that she was frightened. Actively sick now. Sick to her stomach.

BECOMES EXHAUSTED

It was the longest day and night she had ever spent. Finally she was so physically miserable that all the mental miseries seemed to vanish. She thought no more of Ken, of her mother, of the things she was leaving behind. Her only thought was to get to New York, find a hotel, get a room, crawl into bed. . .

Someone had told her about the American Women's Club. It was way up town. After an interminable taxi ride she got there. There was some doubt about a room for her. Weak tears rushed to her eyes . . . she just couldn't start out again. But they found a place for her and she stumbled after the bellhop gratefully. Threw herself, breathing heavily, on the bed.

In the morning a maid awakened her. "Beg pardon, Miss. I was afraid that you were ill."

"No, I'm not ill, thank you," Lily Lou said.

She got up, bathed, dressed. She must find work, make arrangements to begin to study and find a place to live. She couldn't afford to stay here

GETS CHEAP ROOM

She was still very dizzy. Little black spots floated before her troubled eyes. But she went downstairs and bought a newspaper, tore out the "help wanted, female," column, and the section headed "Apartments to let," and a little further down "Furnished rooms."

Only a girl with the splendid physical strength that was Lily Lou's could have done it. She fought the nausea. Forced herself to sleep, to eat, to rise early, and go out to find her way timidly in the unfamiliar streets.

Looking back at it afterward, it was never very real to her. Reading the want ads . . . watching her money dwindle . . . the worry of having to break another $10 bill . . . Her room—really the back parlor of a musty old house on Fifty-seventh street, not far from Park avenue. . . . Hordes of people rushing. Rushing to work. Rushing to lunch. Rushing back to work. Rushing home from work. The unending stream of them. Sometimes it made her think of Market street in San Francisco, and the days she walked with Ken in the morning rush. . . .

And even when she could put him out of mind she couldn't fight the homesickness. It gripped her with its damp, pale fingers, hurting, with a hurt that was almost physical.

GETS JOB AS PIANIST

At times like this she made her way like a sleep-walker through the crowd, eyes set, white face pain-wracked, crying in her heart, "Oh, why did I come? Why did I let him send me here?"

At night when she came home she went to the hall table and sorted over the meager pile of letters, hoping there would be one for her, hoping there wouldn't. . . .

For when you get letters you must write letters, and she couldn't write the family the truth.

There was the hideous three weeks when she played the piano in a chop suey restaurant down on Broadway. An Armenian lad played the fiddle, an elderly German the cello.

Night after night an evil-eyed man with thick, ugly hands drummed at the table nearest the little orchestra, and leered at her. Sometimes he stayed just long enough to eat his dinner. Sometimes he lingered all evening, calling to her in a guttural whisper:

"Peachie! Hullo Peachie! Peachie kiss papa?"

She pretended not to hear. The elderly German went to the manager of the cafe and complained in voluble broken English richly interspersed with curses. The manager lifted fat fingers in a helpless gesture. The man paid, he created no disturbance, what can one do?

Lily Lou was terrified. She felt that the man was demented. She asked the Armenian youth if he would mind walking to the subway with her at 1 o'clock, when they were through. He agreed, and after a week she found his jealous fiancee waiting for them with a vial of something that she screamed was acid.

"I'll teach you to steal my man!" she shrilled, hurling the bottle full at Lily Lou.

FEARS FUTURE

The boy tried to pull her out of danger, and they both fell. The glass shattered on the pavement and a crowd gathered from nowhere.

"Aw, it was empty," a disappointed spectator said.

The girl was weeping violently now, and the youth was trying to comfort her, gesticulating, explaining, begging forgiveness.

Lily Lou slipped away, sickened and humiliated. A splinter of flying glass had cut her cheek. She held her handkerchief over it in the subway, hoping that no one had noticed her part in the street brawl. Such things seer deeply. Her pride was wounded. To think she, an artist . . .

But she swallowed her pride. It was a job. She wouldn't give it up until something better turned up. It paid well, and it left her days free. In a few days, when she was feeling herself again she could look up Tolari, and start her study. After that she wouldn't mind the chop suey place so much, because her mind would be filled with other things.

So she was in her place at the piano again the next night. The Armenian lad kept his head averted. The German looked at them with sad eyes. Lily Lou grit her teeth.

Rag. Blues. Syncopated ballads. An occasional operatic number, with the sad cellist half a beat behind.

Her fingers nearly dropped off. She was so tired, so tired . . . Sometimes she felt that she couldn't bear it any longer.

Then they installed a canned orchestra, and she thought she couldn't bear that either.

Another week of idleness. What if she were really sick in this strange place? What if she had to write home for money . . . not that she'd do it . . . but suppose every cent was gone before she found work?

Synopsis

Lily Lou Lansing, young and pretty telephone operator, gives up her opportunity for an operatic career to marry wealthy Ken Sargent. Ken's mother threatens to have the marriage annulled. Ken loses his position with his father, but secures a better one. The young couple take a small apartment and are ideally happy. Then, one night, Lily Lou awakens to hear Ken sobbing. Next day, Lily Lou meets Peggy Sage, an old friend of Ken's and is stunned to learn from her that Ken lost his job. Later, she is relieved when Ken explained he did not take her into his confidence because he wanted her to be proud of him. After Ken leaves the next morning, a knock comes to the door. It is Ken's father. He asks Lily Lou to give up Ken and informs her their marriage was annulled. He gives her $500 and Lily Lou goes to New York.

ALL IN A DAY

The Friend

THE BOOKING agent whistled happily as he walked along Broadway. He felt decidedly chipper on this particular morning. As Walter O'Keefe reports, the agent had many things for which to be thankful. In spite of the depression, he still had a few actors at work. He still had his office, and he still had his health. All in all, then, he had more than a lot of others.

Along came an actor who is well known to the entire nation, but who only works occasionally because he insists on receiving a certain figure. The actor and this particular agent had never been too friendly. But at this meeting the thespian acted as though the agent was a long-lost brother. He threw his arms around the man and hailed him most heartily.

"Louis," he cried, "am I happy to see you! You don't know what a kick I get out of this."

A look of astonishment crossed the agent's face.

"Yes?" he muttered.

"Yes," returned the actor. "After all, a man in my position meets thousands and thousands of people. Wherever I turn, hands are outstretched and greetings are extended. But after all, what does it mean? Not one of them is a true friend. Not one of them is real.

"That's why, when I meet an old pal such as you, I get a kick out of it. That's why, as I greet you, my heart sings with gladness."

The agent swallowed hard. Th actor had him by the arm and was walking with him. He knew there was something behind all this flowery dialogue, but he couldn't figure it at the moment. So the best he could do was to toss in another meaningless remark.

"That's fine, Tom," he asserted. "I'm always glad to see you, too."

A few more words and the actor suddenly came to the point.

"Louis," he chirped, "you are in a position to do me the greatest favor in the world. Not only me, but also one of the dearest friends I have in the world. I don't want you to think that I am one of those actors who goes around and requests loans from various people. I'm not. Far, far from it."

At the mention of the word "loan," the agent's expression changed. Here it was again. Wouldn't it ever stop? He tried to toss in a few words. But the actor was talking on and on.

"You see, Louis, it's not I who is temporarily embarrassed. Not at all. I still have a few dollars in my pocket, and while that is the case I never worry. It's this friend of mine who is disturbing me terribly.

"With him it's a matter of life or death. The man needs $300, and, if he doesn't get it I'm afraid he will kill himself. I must help him. It's the human thing to do. And that's why I turn to you. Can you lend me $300 to give to him? I will personally promise that you will be repaid in a short time."

The agent shook his head.

"I want to help you, Tom," he said, "and I'd very much like to help your unknown friend. But times are too tough. I'm not in a position to spare $300 right now. I——"

The actor stepped right in.

"You don't understand, Louis," he pleaded. "I wish I could tell you who this man is and give you the reasons why he simply must have the money. But I can't. It wouldn't be fair to him, and I gave my solemn word that I would not betray his confidence.

"But when I tell you that a man is in a desperate situation, you can believe me. You've known me a long, long time—and you know my reputation for honesty and square dealing. Can anyone say anything about me or about my reputation?"

They had reached the entrance to the building in which the agent's office was located. The booker glanced at his watch and shifted nervously from one foot to the other.

"That's not it, Tom," he cried. "It's not a question of you or your reputation. It's simply a question of $300 that I don't want to hand out right now.

"I appreciate the fact that your friend is in desperate need. I appreciate the fact that he's liable to kill himself unless he gets the money. But I tell you again that I can't afford to help him out right now. What more can a man say?"

The actor refused to give up. The persistence he displayed was absolutely a thing of beauty. Surely you've encountered a similar situation in your life. I guess we all have. The man wouldn't take no for an answer.

He gripped the agent's arm.

"Louis," he stated, "I'm going to make just one more stab at this thing in order to have you understand. I swore that I wouldn't reveal my friend's name, but I'm almost tempted to do it.

"Suppose I tell you that he is one of the sweetest guys that ever stepped along Broadway. Suppose I tell you that he has done more to help other people than any one else you might mention. Suppose I tell you that he has sacrificed his time and his money just to assist those who would never move a finger to help him if the situations were reversed. Suppose I tell you these things. Have they no effect on you?

"The name of the man would astound you, and the nature of his difficulties would amaze you even more. If you will give me your word of honor that you will never tell a soul, I will tell you the entire story. Will you?"

"I'm leaving you, Tom," was his reply. "I don't care to know the man's name because it couldn't possibly make any difference. I like to help people and I'd do anything in the world to make your friend a little happier. But what I cannot do, I cannot do. I'm sorry—and goodbye."

Several hours passed. I might tell you that this agent is really a sweet soul and that he felt badly about the situation. Several times during the afternoon he was tempted to call the actor and give him the $300 he had requested. After all, it wouldn't break him—and the man in question would be saved. But the time went by and he didn't make the call.

Around 7 o'clock that night he walked over to the Tavern Restaurant for dinner. Just as he was preparing to enjoy his meal, in walked the actor and a young lady. They took a table a few feet from the agent.

As he munched his food, the agent made up his mind. If the actor hadn't raised that $300 for his friend the booker would give it to him. His mind would feel much easier. So he called the actor to his table.

"Say, Tom," he said, "I've been thinking about that $300 you wanted. I—"

The actor offered an amazing interruption. He laughed heartily.

"I'm very happy you didn't give me that dough, Lewis," he smiled. "Very happy."

"Happy?" repeated the agent incredulously. "Why?"

"Oh," responded the actor easily, "the horse ran last." . . .

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

You are well educated, but what has your education done for you?

Are you a bigger, broader person mentally and morally?

Are you more tolerant?

Are you less prone to censure those who lack education because not having an opportunity to go to school or are you an educated snob?

Are you understanding when it comes to dealing with those who have broken some laws due to poor environment or are you measuring all by the same yardstick?

Even with the advantages you have enjoyed you break laws of such fundamental right that you should be ashamed to blame others who misstep.

Are you unforgiving and heartless in your opinions?

Do you treat unfortunates who have never had a kind word in their lives as if they were utterly devoid of good impulses?

Many a man whom you would scorn would have done more with an education if he had been permitted to have your opportunities.

You take too much credit to yourself as law-abiding.

What have you had in the way of great temptation?

Shielded at every turn on your young life, what if you should be tested. Would you be strong enough to keep going straight?

Frisby Organizing International Police Force!

A postcard from far-off Shanghai-on-Avon signed by our correspondent, Horace Walpole Frisby, brings good news. The Congressman-at-Large is organizing an international police force. Above picture shows the first crack battalion, which has already landed and established headquarters in a pool hall on the Whangpoo River. "We hope," says Frisby, "to gradually enlarge our force until we have a male quartette, dramatic society and a comfortable chair and reading lamp for each and every man. We have adopted the Culbertson forced bid system and hold luncheons every Wednesday. Visiting members of other international police forces are welcome. Committees have been appointed and plans made for the International Policemen's Ball, tickets for which are available at any tea shoppe or from the Secretariate of the League of Nationnes."

The Lindbergh Child

Every human being in this country, and hundreds of millions the world over sympathize most deeply, today, with the bereaved mother and father of the Lindbergh child, cruelly kidnaped.

There are no words that can express the horror of such a crime. It is a dreadful thought that every child, and all fathers and mothers, are exposed to such danger.

Everything will be done that detective skill and world-wide publicity can accomplish.

There is, fortunately, every reason to hope that the missing child will be restored to the arms of its mother.

The police, state and local, in New Jersey are competent, earnest men and will have the co-operation of every citizen in their search for the child, which in all probability is at this moment not far from the home of its father and mother.

Certain indications point to the belief that the kidnaping, while planned in advance, as the ladder would indicate, was to some extent a matter of sudden impulse, and not the work of habitual criminals.

It is quite possible, which should comfort the family, that the kidnaper or kidnapers will soon return the child of their own free will. They will realize that their only hope of escape from punishment lies in restoring the child unharmed to its home, supplying such information as will enable the parents to locate the child and assure its prompt recovery.

Whoever they may be, the kidnapers are solemnly warned that no other course will save them from the fullest punishment for their atrocious and shameful crime. It is not too late for them to undo the most serious consequences for themselves, although they cannot wipe out the dreadful sorrow and suffering that they have inflicted upon the child's father and mother.

With that father and mother the whole world sympathizes. Every American wishes that he could help them in this hour of fearful anxiety. This newspaper expresses here the earnest sympathy of its many readers.

The Legion's Drive

The Campaign to End Unemployment Deserves the Hearty Support of Everybody.

The campaign started by the American Legion to find positions for 1,000,000 unemployed men is one of the most inspiring examples of unselfish public service that the country has witnessed in a long time, and deserves the cordial support of everybody.

We called attention on Monday to the help that householders can give by furnishing part-time employment to the men and women that the local legion posts are trying to aid. A few hours a week in little cleaning, painting and repair jobs may be a godsend to some of these unfortunates, and there are thousands of well-to-do families in Pittsburgh and the vicinity who will benefit by having such work done.

If there are any odd jobs—or, of course, big jobs, too—to be done at your home, get in touch with your neighborhood American Legion post, and let the legionnaires supply the men to do them.

But the procuring of part-time jobs for the unemployed is, after all, only a minor part of the legion's program, and it has been mentioned here thus prominently again only because it is one way in which a very considerable section of the people can help the drive.

The main aim is to obtain full-time positions for the unemployed—jobs in which they can earn decent wages, jobs that will relieve them of the anxiety that now oppresses them and their families, jobs that will enable them to pay their bills and to put into circulation enough money to revive trade.

It is the mills, the shops, the manufacturing and mining and railroad companies, the mercantile concerns and other large employers of labor that must take care of that part of the problem.

If every concern that can possibly do so will add a few men to its payroll—at least one man, anyway—we are sure the whole community will feel the beneficial effect.

The legion is going to canvas Pittsburgh employers and ask them to take on a few more men. The legion has been successful elsewhere, and we believe they will receive many favorable answers to their plea in this city, too.

Question of Propriety

It Is Disturbing to See an Assistant District Attorney Active in Partisan Politics.

Certain federal employes are forbidden to take an active part in politics on the ground that such participation may interfere with the proper performance of their duties.

For the same reason it might be well for members of the staff of the District Attorney of Allegheny County to refrain from active participation in partisan politics.

The thought is evoked by the announcement that nominating petitions have been taken out for Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk for member of the State Republican Committee from the Forty-fourth Senatorial District.

In view of the numerous voting frauds that are committed in every election in Allegheny County, in view of the many cases in which the District Attorney is called upon to prosecute political leaders, it might be best for the District Attorney's assistants to be entirely free from any entangling political obligations and alliances.

The only sure way of being free is for them to take no active part in politics.

New Type of Warden

Appointment of Highly Trained Men as Prison Heads Is a Hopeful Development.

A news item concerning improvements that are being made at the Pennsylvania Industrial School at Huntingdon, a reformatory to which young men guilty of major crimes are sometimes committed from Allegheny County, tells us something about the newly appointed general superintendent, John R. Cranor.

He is a graduate of the University of Chicago, where he specialized in social sciences. He pursued postgraduate studies in criminology and penology at the University of Wisconsin. Then he engaged in educational work. He comes to Pennsylvania from the Illinois State Reformatory at Pontiac, where he has been general superintendent for the last three years.

The appointment of highly trained men as prison wardens in Pennsylvania is a hopeful development, and one for which the appointing powers deserve commendation. It has not been so many years since political considerations dominated in the choice of prison administrators, with the result that the jobs were given to men who had no special qualifications whatever for the delicate work they were called upon to perform.

Pennsylvania has a fine reputation among penologists because of such men as Warden Stanley P. Ashe, of the Western Penitentiary, and our other prison administrators of his type.

Turn the Knob

(Copyright, 1932.)

Only a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan, to be expended in a gigantic scheme of essential public works, will create the jobs needed to put the eight million jobless back to work.

And the workers want work, NOT CHARITY.

Any other scheme is futile.

Once the workers return to work, their increased buying power will make for better business. Better business means more orders to factories for merchandise. This, in turn, means more work. And ALL classes will benefit.

Congress should turn the combination that will unlock the safe and give the workless the work they ask for.

Marry-Go-Round

What Every Woman Wants

Ability, aptitude, appeal—and the greatest of these is APPEAL.

What IS appeal? Every woman would like a large slice of it, with or without French dressing. A nice, big, double portion a la Garbo!

"Appeal," says Mr. Brisbane, "is the power to interest the public by force of personality. The vulgar, outworn 'sex-appeal' is not meant. Nor is mere physical beauty."

Neither is mere intellect meant—although a few good working brain cells never actually HURT a woman, provided she did not try to flaunt them.

I have seen the wittiest and most brilliant women who did not emanate one spark of that magnetism, known as "It." I have seen the most beautiful physical specimens of both sexes, who left you absolutely cold, after the first gaze. Brains and beauty without "appeal" are just so much protoplasm—excess baggage.

And, I have seen plain, anaemic, wiry little women, who had only to enter a room, to galvanize the attention of everybody present and brighten up the party. They just seem to light up the place, like turning on an electric switch. Or bringing in a bowl of daffodils.

I love to put salt on the tail of a theory; and I am beginning to wonder if appeal, charm, personality, magnetism, "It" (choose your own exit) isn't mostly emotional appeal, after all. Just warmth of spirit! Responsiveness, enthusiasm—the glow of feeling within some people, which shines through and radiates around them, like an aura.

This does not, of course, mean emotionalism; goo-ing up the scenery with tears or caresses or tantrums. Nothing so frightens and bores a man as to have a woman deluge him with her emotions! He feels like a cat that has had the maple syrup spilled over it.

* * *

The more emotion you hold in, the more charm you give out. The most magnetic women are the silent, mysterious women, who seem charged with an electric current. The sparkling chatterer spills all her magnetism in the first few minutes.

* * *

Most actresses are more attractive than other women, because they have encouraged the spark within, encouraged and cultivated their emotions, and have never let the fire die out.

* * *

APPEAL is a secret aliveness and awareness—a subtle something that shines through the eyes and oozes through the fingertips—an unseen flame. Sometimes we call it "genius;" sometimes we call it "beauty;" sometimes we call it "personality." But it is probably just the emotional carburetor, igniting the spirit of the human machine.

* * *

Whatever it is, it has nothing to do with the color of a woman's hair, the shape of her legs, the dimples in her elbows or the corrugations in her brain.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 2.—On a stretch of Tenth avenue in the 40's, circus and carnival folk hibernate for the winter. It's the Big Top Rialto made up largely of stake drivers, wagon men, concessionaires, grifters and a sprinkling of piffawmers enjoying the seasonal loaf.

Practically all major circuses are owned today by John Ringlin, who is, to circus people, "Mister Jawn." Away from the sawdust and spangles, it is a clannish crowd. They have their own lingo, code of morals and curious jealousies.

When one borrows from a member of the guild the debt is almost invariably paid. News travels with mysterious swiftness through the circus world and a welcher becomes an outcast. He may be careless about other debts but not those owed his fellows.

It is rare a domestic scandal crops out among them. A flagrant philanderer balks at becoming involved with the wife or sweetheart in the inner circle. He is restrained by his consuming love for the circus. Anything that prevents him from a full confidence is taboo.

Because of the pronounced attachment for their calling, circus folk will work for less pay than entertainers of any other sort. Of course, during season they receive free board—and excellent food, too. But their wages are astonishingly low.

Many aerialists, risking necks twice daily, are paid only $75 a week. Clowns frequently receive as little as $18 weekly, with top pay $40. One of the greatest lion tamers, Clyde Beatty, enters a cage of ferocious beasts for $10 a visit and his board for a season of five months.

The highest paid performer, perhaps, was the dazzling Lillian Leitzel. Yet her salary was said to be less than $1,000 a week. She was the biggest "draw" any circus ever had, and her popularity lasted 10 years, although average professional life is five years.

Alfred Codona, daring Mexican aerialist, was the magnetic Miss Leitzel's husband. When she plunged to death in Sweden he decided to quit the circus. When it opened at the Garden he would not go near but remained in the apartment of his friend, Courtney Ryley Cooper, staring out a window, inarticulate and rolling his handkerchief into an anguished ball. At the end of the week Cooper jockeyed him into a walk past the Garden where crowds were streaming in. That night he was somersaulting in breath-taking whirls from trapeze to trapeze. A valiant trouper obeying the oldest law of the circus—"the show must go on."

* * *

H. T. Webster and the late Claire Briggs were fervent circus fans—incidentally there is a Circus Fans' Association numbering thousands and supporting a monthly magazine. The cartoonists toured with the circus, as guests of Dex Fellowes, several weeks yearly, from which experience they salvaged ideas for Briggs' "When a Feller Needs a Friend," and Webster's "Life's Darkest Moment."

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

She nagged. And then she nagged, and nagged, and nagged, and nagged, and nagged.

The surprise of it! He had not dreamed she was like this. She had seemed so pearly cool; so detached from the mean yammer and disorder of his mucky little life.

The miracle of their marriage had left him gaping. This remote, immaculate creature his wife? It could not be true. This thing could not have happened to him.

And then, suddenly—like something leaping out from behind a mask—the jealous nagging had begun.

Like something leaping—that was it. Like something that had lain hidden and waiting for a long time—as indeed it had.

For this dark thing in Constance had not come with her marriage to Jim. It had come years before that; actually, with the milk from her mother's breast, drinking in that young mother's hatred of men with her first food. Fed on hate—that was how Constance had grown—with hate becoming an inevitable part of her plastic flesh and bone, part of her heart's unconscious rhythm, of her brain's involuntary response.

Like something leaping—and she herself hardly knew why it leaped. Why did she always suspect Jim? Why did she see something sinister in his every blundering act? Why was she always sure there was another woman? She loved Jim and desired him. He was the answer to years of passionate repression. She had come to him eagerly. All her hope and joy and safety was built upon him. And yet—

There was always this other thing between them. This lurking, monstrous thing that swept love aside, as an insane ape sweeps away a paper barrier, with raucous yells and chucklings.

Jealousy? Easy enough to call it that; but jealousy wasn't just a name for something—an angry mood that you could kiss away. Jealousy was a living thing. JEALOUSY WAS ANOTHER PERSON IN THE HOUSE.

But what could she do about it; or what could he? Hate had put that other person in their house—hate of a young wife feeding her baby poison from her furious breast. And there was no stopping that poison, once it had started.

A story of poison—that is the story Warren Spencer tells in his novel, "FOREVER AND EVER." A big theme. He could have told it in big, booming words, making a dark, dramatic spectacle of that progressive horror; but he didn't. He did something harder. He told it in plain little words, plain little scenes, every-day pictures. And because it is so common, so accustomed, you suddenly see Hate as you never saw it before.

You see Hate living—living like another person in the house—living in everybody's house, in your house and my house. You see how Hate can creep in unconsciously, bide its time, year after year, then leap at last, suddenly but inevitably, through all the decencies, wrecking all beauty and tenderness and loyalty and hope.

Read "FOREVER AND EVER."

Read it as though you were opening the book of your own heart.

YOU WILL BE.

Perhaps you can save that heart from wreckage if you read it in time.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

How Strange Is Life

How strange is life that takes our trust
And turns it, sometimes, into dust;
That takes the spirit's high desire
And tramples it into the mire;
That keeps us toiling on and on
Long after faith and hope are gone!

How strange is life that leads us still Against our dreams, against our will,
Against the hopes that once were ours,
As bright as springtime's garden bowers,
And then reveals in whimsy's mood
The purpose else misunderstood.

How strange is life that brings us cares,
Defiances, regrets, despairs;
But is so sweet that we must cling
Despite the hurt, the loss, the sting.
How strange is life, yet fashioned so
Because the soul has need to grow.

The Administration Of Undertakers

By Claude G. Bowers

Author of "The Struggle for Democracy in America," "Founders of the Republic," "Jefferson and Democracy," "The Tragic Era" and other important works, now writing for the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

The President has sent Ernest L. Jahncke, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, to Ohio to tell the people that the human misery, the starvation, the collapse of business and industry, the loss of credit, the loss of foreign markets, are all due to the fact that 12 years ago the man who lifted Mr. Hoover from obscurity outside European circles and repatriated him was President.

Mr. Jahncke sneers at the Federal Reserve system, which is not surprising since the Republicans in Congress opposed its creation almost to a man.

He claims all the credit for all the things the Democratic House has done, and implies that, while the House has acted wisely, it has been because the American people, with unlimited confidence in Mr. Hoover and ardently devoted to him, would have risen in wrath had the House failed to support the President.

This smacks of the campaign methods of Mr. Hoover's friends in 1928—the lowest and basest and most dishonest in the history of American politics.

Perhaps the time has almost come for the Democrats to make reply and to use plain language in discussing the heavy contribution of the Hoover Administration of Undertakers in putting 8,000,000 bread-winners on the street, in placing 25,000,000 men, women and children in distress, in creating the Treasury deficit of more than a billion, in destroying the foreign markets and turning against us the hatred of the world.

Some Plain Talking

There well may be some plain talking on the part the market-minded Administration of Undertakers played in creating the conditions resulting in the market panic of 1929. The utterly false statements given out to the inexperienced, under the authority of the highest offices, to encourage the continuance of the wildest debauch since the Mississippi bubble, can properly be resubmitted now by the Democrats.

The tariff, which has lost us our foreign markets, alienated the best customers we ever had, invited the retaliation of other peoples and contributed to the desperate condition of the railroads and ocean liners, while turning factory workers on the streets, should be discussed frankly in the light of its origin.

Economists said it would be ruinous.

Two-thirds of the press was against it.

And in the beginning Mr. Hoover did not want it.

But we got it—and why? Because the inspiring Mr. Grundy, with an ethical standard all his own, announced openly that he had collected millions of dollars from among his kind to elect Mr. Hoover; and, having paid for something, he expected the delivery of the goods. The President applied the lash and forced the delivery.

If the Democrats plan to wage a "dear teachers and kind classmates" campaign against the group represented by Jahncke's insolent tirade of misrepresentations and falsehoods, they are licked before they begin.

The miserable mess into which the Administration of Undertakers has plunged the American people leaves us with an administration deficit of much more than a billion dollars. The credit of the nation is at stake—we are actually fighting to keep government bonds at par. This is the condition which the Administration of Undertakers has thrown into the lap of the Democratic House. This condition must be met; and having taxed everything taxable to the limit of reasonable returns, only to find ourselves $400,000,000 short, we are forced to the sales tax.

And having met this problem of the Administration of Undertakers in the only way possible or practical now, the Democratic House, seeking to save the credit of the nation endangered by the economic stupidities of the Administration, is met smugly by Mr. Snell, the Republican House leader, with this impudent and utterly demagogic statement:

"It's my judgment that Congress should spend more time reducing government expenses instead of spending so much time trying to find new sources of revenue."

For three years the Administration of Undertakers spent no time reducing government expenses while we were rushing into a billion-dollar deficit.

And it is planning reforms in the executive departments—that the President had ignored, despite his campaign pledge.

The President 'Deplored' These Speeches

Thus far the Democratic leadership in House and Senate properly has concentrated on constructive measures for the relief of business. It has frowned on mere attacks, insisted on the dispatch of important public business with the least possible delay, and made no mistakes in judgment or in method. But in the midst of its work the Administration of Undertakers sends forth its spokesmen, with the knowledge and approval of the President, with speeches soaked with misrepresentations and falsehoods, handled for the press by that Lincolnian figure, Mr. Lucas, to discredit the party that is seeking to wipe out the administration's deficit.

When, after the celebration of Mr. Hoover's birthday—or was it Lincoln's? — when discredited members of the Administration of Undertakers delivered tirades against the only people who have done anything to meet the present crisis in the last three years, the President said, following the criticism of the press, that he "deplored" these speeches.

We pointed out in these columns then that it seemed passing strange that he deplored the speeches of his own subordinates; expressed the opinion that the tenor of them must have been known to him before; he called attention to the fact that they were sent out by Mr. Lucas, the President's man.

Now that Jahncke has spoken, reiterating, with new trimmings, the speeches of Hoover's birthday—or was it Lincoln's?—the public must be convinced that Mr. Hoover not only cannot control his own party but even his own henchmen. Either that or that the deploring of the President was in the Pickwickian sense.

It Seems Incredible

And yet it seems incredible that the President should have sanctioned the attacks upon the administration of which Mr. Hoover was very glad to be a part 12 years ago, and the slurs upon the man who made possible his repatriation. No man living owes as much to President Wilson as Mr. Hoover, and by that token we prefer to believe that he has not sanctioned the far-fetched and absurd attacks of Mr. Hurley or Mr. Jahncke.

The speeches that the President "deplores" are a fair warning of the kind of campaign for re-election the President intends to wage. Perhaps the campaign of 1928 is not to be happily unique in American history. But in view of the fruits of the victory of 1928 the American people may have cut their eye teeth.
